Boys Will Be Girls is published by the United Transvestite & Transsexual Society, known as (U.T.T.S.), P.O. Box 246, Bay Head, New Jersey 08742. It's contents are the results of a joint effort between the staff and membership of UTTS. We welcome contributions, but the publisher does not assume responsibilty for loss of unsolicited material. Material submitted without return postage and self addressed envelope cannot be returned. Subscription and advertising rates are available on request.

Any similarity to persons living or dead, or to persons named in fiction or semi-fiction, is entirely coincidental. All photographs used for any purpose in this magazine are posed by professional models, unless submitted by the membership of UTTS, and neither the photographs nor the words accompanying them, describe, nor are they meant to be understood as the actual personality or conduct of the model or members.

United Transvestite and Transsexual Society

The United Transvestite & Transsexual Society welcomes all of you to the Premiere Issue of BOYS WILL BE GIRLS; the newest, and what we feel is the best publication for crossdressers on the market today. This magazine and the devotion of the staff behind it, promises to be the greatest thing going for all of us crossdressers, yes I said us, for the entire staff of BOYS WILL BE GIRLS, are either transvestites or transsexuals with a lot of experience in the publishing field. We have been through all the hassels, torment and put-downs we're going to take.

UTTS has been around for a good many years, and many of you may have heard of it. But compared to what is happening now, it was on a very small scale. UTTS was limited to production capabilities and had a limited membership. Although it is nation wide, we could only reach a small number of you. With the distribution we now have with this new magazine, we have unlimited capabilities and can reach out to each and every one of you, giving you all a chance to share in a beautiful and total transvestite experience, that you could only have dreamed of in the past.

There's a lot happening out there, and you can all be a part of it. We're not too concerned about changing any laws or changing the society we live in. We tried all that in the past, and nobody really wanted it, so we got nowhere. But we did find that we could make our own fun, create our own society, and enjoy every pleasurable minute of it. The only thing that we really concentrate on now, is having as much fun as we can possibly have, with as many of you that care to join us while we're doing it.

Our first function is to show you that you're not alone anymore. Should you care to take advantage of any of the things we offer, then we're here to help you get started. If your only interest is to stay at home and slip into your little frillys, then we're here to entertain you with our publication and share other peoples' experiences with you. If you're looking for something very special, we'll help you find it and enjoy it to the fullest. We've been around long enough to know where to find just about anything your little heart desires. We have speciality groups that cater to every aspect of crossdressing, and if it's not in your local area, it would only take a letter from you to us telling us what you want. If we can't find it for you, then we'll start a group for you with the specialty you have in mind. As of right now, we have groups with interest in: Little Girls, French Maids, School Girls, all types of Uniforms, Cheer Leaders, Styles for the 20's, 50's, 60's, 1800's, Bondage, S & M, Spanking, Cooking, Sewing, High Fashion, Slave Girls, Old Ladies, Swim Suits, Out Door groups, Female Impersonator stage groups, Waitress & Bar Maids, and the list keeps on going and growing every day.

It all started one day, when I sent out a letter inviting a few Crossdressers that had written to me when I was the editor of Female Impersonator Magazine, over to my home for the first TV party I was to give, of which there were about twelve people attending. From that point on, we began averaging fifty and up at each party, and who came from an area ranging from Point Pleasant, N.J. to Phil. Pa. Then on and on, with at least one specialty party every month or so. In each group there are also the Balls that come up every so often, which will be held on a regular schedule now that we have the proper locations in which to hold them.

Besides all the fun we have, we do get down to the serious business of helping out the crossdressers that need help with different problems, such as: how to apply make-up, how to pass in public, proper methods of dressing, and generally any self improvement programs that are needed by our friends and members to help them become as FEM as they possibly can.

When ever a member has a problem concerning cross dressing, they can either call us or write us a letter and if we can, we help them out with it. But that's a risky business, and it will all depend on the problem he confronts us with as to how much help we will be.

Probably the most active function we have is our contact program. We have several methods in which we accomplish this. The most widely used is the personal ads section of our publications. This is a free service for our members, and they may place and answer as many personal ads with their photographs they choose to with no service charges at all. Another method is the opened list program, where members may have their names addresses and or phone numbers published in the Satin Ribbon (our news letter sent to members only) and other members may contact them without going through a middle man. It is also the most effective and fastest way to meet another crossdresser.

Of course the most exciting way to meet others is face to face at one of the UTTS parties. Many a new friendship has been sparked at these little gatherings. They usually average from ten to twenty people, depending on the time of the year and the places they are held.

The bottom line of our organization is, Fun, Entertainment, Excitement, and the comfort of knowing that your finally with people that care and understand what you're all about.

UTTS has many people from all walks of life, all with different tastes and desires, but we're all united with a single element, the clothing of the opposite sex. Somewhere in all of this, you find what you're searching for, and we'd be happy to have you as a new member. It doesn't take much to join us either, for as little as fifteen dollars a year, we can bring it all to you. If you care to join us, you'll find a blank in this book. Fill it out and send it in, or use a plain piece of paper with the same information included on it. As a member you'll be getting the monthly newsletter, your official I.D. card and all the benefits of the UTTS membership, explained elsewhere in this issue.

Now find some place comfortable, slip into your far-out outfit, freshen up your make-up and get ready for page after page of entertainment and pleasure, and remember, BOYS WILL BE GIRLS!!

Meet Bee Bee-Q

Bee Bee Q is the newest member of the UTTS staff. Her talents as a writer and artist will be unfolded in future issues of our publications Foyer, Mini-Mag, Boys Will Be Girls and the Satin Ribbon.

Her energy, wit and humor not only keep us in stitches at the office, but will prove a great asset to us. There's never a dull moment with her around and, as you can see from the photographs in this section, her versility is unlimited.

Her interests lie mainly in art, poodles, photography, writing, parties and general clowning around. Shocking people on the street is only a small part of the way she gets her kicks.

The stories we've heard about costume parties, Halloween parties and other events are almost unbelievable, yet true. She has entertained us for hours on end and as we get into our future issues, you'll be entertained by the stories of her antics.

HELPFUL HINTS

I've been a TV and a member of UTTS for several years. I especially appreciate the columns by Connie Lee King and Barbra Brodie. Their suggestions are very helpful. Since they are both TSs though, some of their tips cannot be used by someone like myself, a TV. For instance, I cannot shave my body hair or use wax to remove it, among other restrictions. I try to overcome this by selecting clothes and make-up that enables me to look as feminine as possible under these conditions.

I wear brown opaque stockings that I get at a chain of hosiery shops called Alberts'. They have them in extra long sizes that come up to the top of my legs. With a garter belt that I added two more garters to, and wearing flare-leg "tap pants" panties, there is no show of flesh between my panties and the top of my stockings. I am 6 feet tall, yet this covers my legs very well. Being tall, I also find that tops and skirts are better than dresses. A dress that is large enough for my shoulders and bust (38-C) is usually too full and out of proportion for the rest of my body, since my waist and hips are fairly slender. By getting a top in either XL or "Long", I can then get a skirt to fit my waist and hips properly. Since I have what I think are beautiful legs, I wear my skirts quite short. I shorten them myself by using the bonding gauze that can be bought at any notions department. First, I iron a crease in the hem of the skirt at the length I want. Then I trim off the excess cloth leaving about a 2" hem. then, with a steam iron and following the directions, I fix the hem by ironing the bonding gauze between the folded back cloth. Always do this in the inside of the hem to avoid any scorch marks.

Stylish shoes are always a problem since I wear a size 12 in a man's shoe. Luckily, my foot is very thin so I can get into shorter sizes. I love the new styles since high-heels are back in fashion along with open toes and sling backs. With this style I can wear a size 10 Medium which is very common in womens' shoes. For the TV who has a size problem, they can find lovely styles at Milton Bodner, 38 Lexington Ave., Passaic, New Jersey 07055. They carry sizes from 4 AAAA to 12 D and will send you a free catalogue if you write to them.

If you would like long, even fingernails, I can personally recommend Sally Hansen's Hard as Nails polish. It comes in clear so anyone can wear it, anytime. I wish a lot of men I know would use it, since some of them have very rough looking hands. It is a shame when a guy gets all dressed up and looks and smells good, to have his appearance ruined by screwed up nails and rough hands. For us girls, this product is a godsend, since we care about how our hands look and nice nails are important to us.

I would like again to warn all the girls who read my column about shaving their legs. Please don't use a razor and blade, since your hair will come in faster and heavier every time you shave. When you want smooth skin, use a cream hair remover such as Neat or Nair. It is easier than using a razor and there is no chance of getting cut. Follow the directions closely when using these products. Hair grows faster in warm weather and shows up more on tan skin, so expect to have to remove it at least once a week in the summer. Baby oil is good for every part of your body, so keep a good supply on hand.

Susie has some nice wigs for sale, so check with her before you buy somewhere else. If you have a good hairline in front, take time and consider a wiglet or a fall hairpiece, since they are cooler in the summer.

I hope all my readers are getting out of the closet. The first few trips into the outside are not easy, but you have to walk before you can run. Believe me, once you have overcome your fears and gotten past the front door the rest will work itself out. If you are trapped in your closet by some special problem, write to me. I'll try to help you. Being a TV or TS is not easy and it requires a lot of time and effort to be a sexy girl. But once we have made the effort and are able to walk down the street looking our best, we know all the work was worth it.

If you are a TV, TS, gay girl or guy, consider yourself lucky to be living in today's world where the freedom to be yourself is better everyday. Gay girls now have their own bars and clubs which is something that is long overdue. More and more, doctors are giving hormone injections and pills, and society, in general, is easing up on it's persecution of the person who dares to be different.

Thanks to people like Rene Richards, more and more TSs are coming out of the closet and taking the final steps to becoming their female selves.

For years, I lived as two people. Outside, I looked and acted like a real Macho male, but in my heart and soul, where it counts, I have always been a woman. Now today, I am all one person and I'm so very happy. There aren't words to tell how I feel. I no longer have to pretend I'm something I really am not. Now I'm all woman and I want to help make all of you out there as happy as I am by helping you become what you are in your hearts. The old typecasting of the past doesn't apply anymore. Girls like myself can, if they care to, do most anything they want. They are no longer tied to the gas range and the mop. The helpless female is a relic of the fifties, and now, if a girl is able, she can command any situation. The other side of the coin is that a male can, if he wishes, show his more gentle side. I have never cared to much for the Macho type male, although I defend his right to be himself. I'm delighted to see more and more males showing their emotions and being more as they really are inside.

Write to me and give me your views and tell me your problems. I can't know what to write about if I don't know what's bothering you. I am here to help you solve your dressing problems and express myself by joining together with you in mutual need. I need your help and support. I need your letters to know what's going on in your lives. I need to know you are out there so I can know my efforts in this column are not falling on deaf ears.

I'll answer all the letters I get and try to solve all the problems I hear about. Sex is fun, and if you want to talk sexy in your letter, go right ahead. Remember, I like sex too, and gay is great and Bi is beautiful. Girls, if your old man leaves you alone at night, write me and I'll knock off a few hundred words so you have something to read while you wait for the bum to come home.

what is a TV

by

J. E. Reviere, D. D.

I appreciate your statements of agreement and confidence in the points of view I've expressed in other pages. I am no longer receiving S. Hall's efforts. It certainly does not conform to my standards of propriety and taste. For me, dressing is being the lady I feel inside. It is not a sexual gambit or a substitute sexuality. For me, dressing is an asexual thing, apart from sexual considerations, and as such, a part of the total human being I am. When I dress as a "man", I do not act the part of a lecher or devote myself totally to sexual matters. When I dress as a "woman", I am the same person, the same real person, inside, with only an external appearance alteration. The blending of a masculinity that is undeniable and a truly felt femininity, yeilds in me what I call UNITY or oneness. I am not two people in one carcass, I am one person who is co-equally masculine and feminine, one person who prefers being myself to playing socially prescribed gender roles based solely on Genito-urinary plumbing. When dressed as a "man", I wear feminine undies, etc., and inside feel the way a "woman" feels. When dressed as a "woman", I think the way a "man" thinks and deport myself as a wholeperson exclusively. Upon the basis of these considerations, I try, in my writting, to encourage others to understand themselves in a responsive manner, and deport themselves accordingly. There are woefully many who lack the mentality to grasp the essence of being a unity person and for whom sex is God, and who, in their actions, deprave all that is good, wholesome, lovely and really worthwhile in womanhood. For these, my words are as pearls cast before swine, wasted and an anathema.

Best regards,

DIFFERENT?

The pain comes. The pain comes often. The pain comes consistantly. The pain seems never to stop, when you are different! You don't have to be sick. You don't have to be deformed. In fact, you may be just as healthy as anyone or even healthier than others are. Being as healthy as anyone else, both physically and psychologically, is no assurance of being free from pain. As a matter of fact, if you are different, you hurt!

While growing up, you were puzzled by the pain. At first you wondered why you hurt. Gradually, you learned to tolerate the pain. You still did not understand why you hurt. Gradually you learned, little of life is as you thought it to be. There seemed to be no such thing as fairness. At first you thought you hurt because you were somehow evil or unworthy. Then, gradually, you learned this was not necessarily the case at all. You learned people hurt you because you are different.

Then, to avoid the hurt, you tried very hard to be like other people. You thought they would love, accept and not hurt you if you could just be like others, so they will let you alone and not hurt you. Gradually you learned to be happy being different. Slowly, you learned you don't have to have approval of everyone you meet. Gradually you learned you don't have to do anything but be yourself, you learned you could only be yourself. Gradually you learned your hurt came from your reaction to being rejected because you are different. Gradually you learned when others did not like you, did not accept you, it is their problem. Gradually you learned to like yourself. Gradually you learned to love your different self, to respect yourself and be different in spite of the hurt.

Being an individual, being distinguishable from the faceless mass of society, is a token goal in American society. It is the sort of thing which political rhetoric is made. It is the sort of thing to which lip service is paid. It is the sort of thing set up as a goal, a desirable thing for us all to achieve. Being an individual is endowed with near holy qualities because some who have beeu bold in their individuality have accomplished much with it.

Determined to mold us all into a faceless mass, there are pervasive forces in our social order, forces which deny us our very individuality at every possible juncture. Much of this is done in the guise of efficiency, the guise of management of data, the guise of providing "government services" to us. "Big Brother" keeps tabs on us all via our Social Security Account Number which big government gladly provides to each of us free of cost [we think]. Much of this molding is done in the guise of "protecting the public" from unseen threats or so-called unscrupulous business or charlatans in the delivery of "professional" services. In most every aspect of life, there are those who, for outright self interest, are intent upon keeping the remainder of society in the status of "layman". This has obvious economic value to those who are successful. The stylings and offerings in consumer products illustrates the potent sameness. In the quest of greater and greater profit on investment, industry pours forth gross mass produced sameness. Great pressures are exerted on people to conform, to be molded and shaped from cradle to grave, to be shaped into a faceless, unthinking, consuming unit in the nest of commerce and government.

Children are continually given rigid training in being "little men" or "little women" according to whatever the significant others in the childs life happen to think a "man" or a "woman" is. The child has no input into this life shaping, which is calculated to determine his or her personality and identity based generally on the reproductive organs with which the child comes into the world and the behaviors deemed "appropriate" to that physical structure. All choice is withheld from the child. Society has predetermined this for them. Most adults aren't even aware that they are such potent agents of conformity. here are multitudes of forces in society setting these "standards" and "norms". The adults in the environment, fathers, uncles, mothers, aunts, grandparents and such, quite unknowingly serve as enforcers of the dictated standards and norms. The child is rewarded for "approved" behaviors and punished or ridiculed for behaviors of which society approves not. This is a near classic form of Skinnerian Behavior Modification which denies the individual any choice at all for all practical purposes since in the case of a child there is no awareness of the process.

At first, those close family members set the patterns and enforce the codes. Later, as the realm of operation of the child widens, the influential range of enforcers is widened. This grows to include teachers, ministers, peers, and the legal structure of the society. These shape, mold, and coerce the individual into being whatever the overall concept of society demands, or else. This is particularly true in matters sexual and genderal. Societal hang-ups in this area are legion. A case in point is the situation of the heterosexual male who recognizes internally a large degree of femininity within himself and feels the desire to express this by dressing as a woman some, if not all, of the time. While there exists a clear line of demarkation between sex, which is biological, and gender, which is psychological, society blindly stamps out reproductions of itself, thus insuring itself of it's infallability in assuming sex and gender to be the same thing. In fact, they are not. Universally, the male mentioned above is subjected to erroneous accusations of homosexuality and worse by ignorant and arrogant people who despise the individual and reject his right to be himself singularly because he is different ... unconventional ... resistant to the conditioning!

To see the potency and perhaps understand the forces in this area of human life, one has but to look at the sorry record of the arguments in Dade County, Florida in the struggle for human rights. The irrational fervor of the opposition was reason defying, drumming on the senses and unbelievable. In fact, crass emotionalism held sway rather than reason. It would seem in a society in which the civil rights of the many are dependant totally upon the civil rights of the individual, a society in which civil rights are spoken of as a sacred thing, that there are certain exceptions. If you are too different, you have no civil rights as it were. There are certain sub-groups within our society for which the guarantees are but words on paper, and meaningless words at that. Identification with, not even membership in, one of these groups would seem to revoke guaranteed civil rights. Such identification does not even have to be factually based, only rumor will do, it seems to plainly catagorize the individual as somehow being subhuman, not worthy of rights or respect. Such would seem to be the price one pays to be different in a society that espouses individualism as a great and noble goal.

While the behavior of a transvestite [a person who, for some reason wears the clothing society assigns to the opposite sex] is totally apart from and completely distinct from homosexuality, it remains identified as a sexual perversion by ignorant people among us. In the professional literature over the years, transvestism has been clearly established as a distinct behavior pattern. By some, cross-dressing is seen as a thing of gender in contradistinction to a thing of sex. It is not homosexuality. It is seen as a love for the feminine and a great love for the femininity in womanhood. It is seen as a turning away from the "super" macho facades of ordinary masculinity, many of which attitudes are the stock in trade of practitioners of the homosexual life style. The referenced events in Dade County, Florida, and more recently in other parts of the country, clearly indicate the mood and temper of our society in respect to homosexuals as a sub-group too different to be tolerated openly. Those who would espouse a cause and engage in irritating or defiant acts on behalf of a cause, usually serve no long range good, rather they seem to rally opposition. Being different is one thing, being too different to be tolerated is something else all-together.

What then for those who are different, those who want to be quiet, respectable, law-abiding citizens and retain their individuality and differences at the same time? Are they to forego their individual liberties and rights to be themselves for the dubious acceptance of a society that says one thing and does another? Or are they to retreat undrground and stay out of sight awaiting perhaps a more auspicious time? Minority groups must each develop their unique identities. They must be themselves. They must express themselves and at the same time demonstrate themselves as honorable citizens worty of respect and acceptance in spite of their differences. They must forcefully disallow any and all typecasting by the ignorant who would suppress them. Different individuals must deport themselves in a way in which they can prove themselves worthy of the acceptance they desire. In their difference they have to be individually and collectively acceptable people who contribute to the betterment of society, who deport themselves in ways that clearly and finally refute the bias ignorant people hold against them. Crossdressers in particular have to clean up thier act, thier publications and thier public image and in so doing be constantly alert in their behaviors to anything that could possibly bring discredit either to themsellves or to thier number.

Society will accept people who are different so long as they are not too different. Society is terribly "hung-up" about things sexual and genderal. In mistaking the two for a common thing, society needs help, information and assistive understanding. Those who are "too different" have already been soundly stamped as unacceptable. Transvestites cannot allow themselves to be identified as "too different". For crossdressers to achieve acceptance, they have to be different and do it within the limits society has demonstrated it can tolerate. Pressure tactics, demands, demonstrations, crusades and such tend to cement negative impressions and in so doing further restrict the very freedom sought. The "cause" of the transvestite must be one in which prudence, patience and gentle persuasion, and demonstrated good will, prevail.

True, the pain never stops. Even in the process of being an individual, a distinct different person, the pain persists. It persists because there remains acceptance and liberty to be gained, there remains an open place in acceptable society to be developed and deserved. In part, it persists because some of the barbs hurled are deserved, not by all, but by many. It is possible to be happy being different, especially if your being different is being yourself, not merely trading one form of conformity for another. If you discover who you are, accept yourself and learn that the rejections of others stem from their problems, not yours, you can be happy in spite of the pain. You can be happy being different. Do what is necessary to be yourself, but in all things, know yourself and to yourself be absolutely true.

GROWING YOUR OWN BREASTS

A year or two before I became interested in growing breasts, I had met Harry Benjamin socially and at that time had an opportunity to chat with him about his work; so I was inclined to believe his observation that continued estrogen therapy would produce a reduction of the libido, followed by eventual castration. However, somewhat later, a friend, whose experience I also trusted, gave me a contradictory view that intimated that things weren't really as bad as Benjamin had projected. She reported that she had taken estrogen for some time and was as horny as ever!

Very confusing indeed!

Possibly the answer is that it's simply a function of the original libido of the person under observation.

I rather suspect this is it, because my own experience confirms both observations!

In my own case, as it turned out, when the opportunity came to get some prescription Premarin easily, I was in the depths of an emotional depression brought about by the loss of a girl to whom I was deeply attached; so I wasn't overly concerned with the thought that it might sublimate my libido. In fact, under the circumstances, some moderation of my obsessive sex drive might prove to be desirable; and it seemed like this might be as ideal a time as any to experiment. So I took the step I had been resisting for years.

However, I was interested to note, in those first few months, that even though I was taking a rather high dosage of estrogen, there was no diminution of my libido at all. Later, as I came out of emotional depression, I felt like being sociable again. And, before I kew it, I was back in the party circuit again at full strength.

I was still as horny as ever, even though my breasts were blooming. My friends could'nt believe it, and there were gloomy forecasts of what would happen to me. But, there was no denying at that time that I was at the height of my sexual prowess. As time went on, I began to think that the myth of chemical castration was simply dreamed up by the gals who didn't have any libido to start with as an excuse for not doing anything with girls.

My doctor was very interested in my experiences, although I suspect he didn't quite believe me.

However, as things went along, I began to notice that even though I had no trouble making out with girls who really turned me on, I was not terribly interested in swinging with any woman who happened to be around. So my wild party life began to be more subdued - a thing I rather liked, because although I have no particular hangups about sex, therfe is always a risk of catching sometghing if one is too promiscuous.

It wasn't until later, when my principal girl friend started complaining that I really didn't like her any more, that it dawned on me that possible Dr. Benjamin was right after all. It really looked like my sex drive was diminishing, because, in the early days of our romance, I had been erect all the time I was with her. Now, I just acted like all the other males!

What to do? Obviously, at this point, the problem had to faced squarely. What did I really want? Sexual ability, or breasts?

(Tune in next week to hear the conclusion of this drama!)

Well, Hell! Of course! What do you think I did? I chose to stop taking hormones! (This shows which side of me is dominant, doesn't it?)

But the funny thing was that, in the process of discontinuing hormones, I discovered that one's breast growth, although it may eventually be reversible, doesn't go down nearly as fast as it comes up. But, one's libido comes right back. So all one needs to do, if one wants to be both horny and stacked, is to alternate periods of therapy with periods of rest.

This discovery is perhaps the most important one that I made during my course of therapy. I have continued with this kind of regime long enough to safely say that it works; so you really don't need to worry about the chemical castration problem either.

HOW TO FIND A DOCTOR

Now that you've finally made up your mind to go ahead with the bosoms, and you really believe that it would be better to be under a doctor's care during the process of development, the next problem to be solved is how to find a doctor who is knowledgable enough to do you some good.

I would like to say that the following list of doctors will accept transsexual patients and then give you a list so you could call up the nearest one for an appointment. But it would seem that the American Medical Association frowns on this kind of thing (it smacks too much of advertising, which is unethical(, so the doctors have requested that their names be withheld.

However, this magazine has on file the names and addresses of some of the more prominent physicians who are known to have helped transsexuals. If you live in one of the large metropolitan areas, the publishing staff can probably help you on an individual basis. Merely direct your request to the publisher.

However, if you live in a less densely populated area, the probabilities are that no doctor in your area has treated a transsexual before, so you'll have to go prospecting for a doctor.

Now, lest you be worried over this task, let me assure you that the process of prospecting for a doctor is not a difficult one-it just takes a little time because you may have to educate the doctor. I would suggest you use the following method:

Go through the phone book and find a General Practioner who lives fairly near you. Then call his office and ask what his age is. If he is under 35, and not a Catholic, the chances are that you'll succeed in finding a doctor on your first contact.

If he qualifies as to age, make an appointment with him and when it is time to see him, if you have experience enough with drag so that you can pass, meet him the first time as a girl.

Once your in his office, don't beat around the bush. Tell him straight out that you've come to him because you want to begin estrogen therapy and that you want him to prescribe Premarin for you.

If he asks why, tell him that you are not genetically female—but rather a transsexual—and that your breasts are not large enough to satisfy you. And, if by this time he hasn't shown that he's hostile to the idea, but merely uninformed, hand him a copy of Dr. Benjamin's book or the Appendix from this article, and tell him you'd like to have him get up to speed on your problem. Then, arrange for another appointment.

Naturally, if he shows hostility, you will have to get yourself another doctor. But you don't need to worry that you've given yourself away, because the information be has about you is absolutely confidential and he'd be violating the AMA's code of ethics if he told anyone about you without your prior permission. So you are absolutely safe in this regard.

One of my friends recently tried this method and it worked fine for her, so there is no reason why it shouldn't work for you.

HORMONE TYPES AND DOSAGE

When one starts into hormone therapy, one usually has just made some momentous decisions about the future course of his life and there is severe pressure to get on with the job and achieve feminization as quickly as possible. For this reason, there is always the temptation to experiment with the most potent of the synthetic estrogens and to take doses that are higher than recommended.

You should resist this temptation because if you persist in either course you stand a good chance of ruining your health.

There are scores of synthetic hormones available today which have been developed in the pharmaceutical laboratories all over the world in the last 25 years or so. To really get the feeling of how many, you need only refer to Merck Index under the heading of estrogen or progesterone. There you will find listed a host of preparations formulated by many, many drug companies.

However, almost all of these seem to be inferior to the natural hormone, because they invariably produce some undesirable side effect or other in people.

There are a number of preparations, for instance, based on the chemistry of a synthetic estrogen called Stilbestrol (once widely useds the chicken industry to caponize male birds). These seem to uniformly cause morning nausea and headaches.

A very powerful birth control pill called Provest, composed of synthetic estrogen and progestrone, has been prescribed for some girls by physicians in the East. This has been reported to cause great soreness in the nipples—although this may be due to the fact that it is taken in dosages that are too high.

The best, most easily available, least dangerous, and least expensive preparation currently under prescription is a cojugated natural estrogen called Premarin. This compound contains the entire spectrum of natural hormones that exist in the system of the pregnant mare and is prepared by Ayerst in tablets of 1.25 milligram (mg) (Yellow), 215 mg (Purple), etc.

The yellow 1.25 mg tablets are very common because they are used for postmenopausal estrogen replacement therapy (in women). The purple pills seem equally common although there can't be all that many transsexuals on the pill yet.

Premarin is the favored treatment for males who are starting into the sex change, because it is highly effective and apparently has few side iffects. Aside from some slight tenderness in my nipples , which is a normal growth effect, I notice no side effects whatever from this preparation during the course of my therapy.

Premarin is commonly prescribed for males at 2.5 mg per day, and except for the first few weeks of your therapy, you will be well-advised to stick to this dosage.

Estrogen can only be used by the body on a current basis. No estrogen is stored by the system and any excess over the amount that can be used immediately is passed out as waste through the kidneys into the urine. So, taking an overdose of estrogen will do you no good whatever. All you will accomplish is to overload your kidneys, and if you persist in this for very long, they will let you know about it in no uncertain terms!

However, if you should mistakenly take an overdose of hormones because you were forgetful and simply wanted to be sure you got enough for the day, you probably won't feel any ill effects; in fact, I noticed that temporary dosages as high as 15 mg were not haarmful. The only thing that happens is that you throw away good estrogen.

Although no really definite metabolic measurement has been made on a significant population of males so as to determine optimum dosage of estrogen (the only such measurements that I know of were made by Dr. Christian Hamburger on Christine Jorgensen) as therapy continues, your body will itself provide excellent guidposts which you should not fail to heed.

As Dr. Benjamin puts it, when your nipples get so sen□sitive that you can't tolerate the irritation of wearing a jacket, you should back off on the dosage. You will be forced to, anyway, because your nipples will get to be so sore that you won't be able to sleep!

Many of the girls I know claim that 2.5 mg is not enough to give them the maximum growth in the minimum time. And this may well be traue in the early stages of therapy because it takes a certain amount of estrogen to just turn your body processes around from the male course they'd taken all those years and start them toward the female.

To throw more light on thes problem, I experimented with higher dosages and found that, for my system, the optimum effect came at a dosage of about two pills a day, which I spaced 12 hours apart. However, as my breasts filled out, I found that I could not sustain this dosage comfortably, so I had to drop back to 2.5 mg per day and then, to 1.25 mg per day.

Since estrogen can only be absorbed by the body on a current basis, many doctors favor using massive injections of hormone in oil. The theory here is that the oil will bleed out of the tissue and be absorbed, along with the estrogen, at a steady rate. I the dosage is calculated correctly, this will keep the body under maximum estrogenic effect continously.

If you're in a great hurry to get your superstructure up, I suppose the added expense of such injections is justified; but I found that in a year, at about 15 cents a day, I could develope all the rise I wanted by simply taking the purple pills orally.

When one first starts to take estrogen, not much happens for about ten days—and this time lag from the start of dosage to the start of physical effect seems to remain rather comsistent all through the varaious stages of development, whenever one stops treatment for any reason. Apparently, it takes about this long for the estrogen to gain the upper hand in the processes supervised by your testosterone.

After this latent period is over, one notices a rather pleasant scratchiness in and around the nipples and a slowly developing hardness in the breasts just under the areolae. On the basic male chest, this beginning change simply appears as a slight swelling of the nipples, producing an effect visually similar to the one noticed just after you have been swimming in very cold water.

As time goes on, the volume of the hard area continues to increase, and at about the sixty day point, one's chest begins to look less like that of the male and more like the form of a young girl in her early puberty. Then as things go farther, the truly feminine roundness' becomes more apparent; u□ntil, in the limit, one has breasts that are very realistic "in appearance."

Coccinelle's account of her change contains some excellent photos of her bvody as transformed by estrogen, and I would recommend that you have a look at them, c.f. REVERSE SEX, written by Mario Costa (1962) and SHE MALE, written by Carlson Wade (1963).

The publication FEMALE MIMICS also has excellent coverage of the development of the French performers, Capucine and Bambi, among others.

The photos of me should be rather self-explanatory. The various stages shown are seperated by approximately equal intervals of time. The total period was a little over one year.

I have concentrated on breast development in this article so far, because that is what I WAS INTERESTED IN: but I must warn you that that's not all that may develop as a result of estrogen therapy. In point of fact, you may develop all over! In other words, you'll probablyput on a lot of weight!

Estrogen works on the body by two mechanisms. IN THE BREASTS* IT ENCOURAGES THAT DORMANT MALE LYMPH NODES (which exist in the breast tissue) to expand—this accounts for the hardness in the breasts when the body is subjected to hormone therapy, and also accounts for the slackness in the female breast after menopause when the estrogen supplied by the body has decreased.

However, estrogen also causes the body fat to redistribute and a lot of fat, of course, gets moved up to the chest. (This is why the breasts remain after one ceases to take estrogen. But a lot of it gets moved elsewhere, too.)

The principle other place—where I do not like it to be at all—is the thighs, and as a result of my period of therapy, my thighs and fanny have really become rather heavy.

The arm and face also get their share of redistributed fat. Most girls like this, because it does make them more feminine looking. However, I liked the way I looked before, and I admire a trim figure on a woman; so I was really quite pushed out of shape to find that I was getting to look very matronly!

There's nothing one can do about it, though, short of starving ones-self to death—and i've never been very successful with dieting.

The early stage of breast expansion may get going remarkably fast. It was only a little while until I had a nice development. But then, the apparent rate of growth seems to be slow.

But don't get discouraged. The process is still going at the same rate. The thing you've forgotten is that your breasts are three dimensional.

It seems apparent that the total weight put on is directly proportional to the number of pills you take, but the volume of a hemisphere is proportional to the dube of the radius, so it takes you eight times as long to double you linear dimensions (or cup size).

If this statement is confusing, let me put it to you this way:

The daily increment of growth caused by the estrogen remains the same throughout the whole period of therapy, but the observed effect, as measured by the cup size, appears to be less and less as time goes on. This comes about partly because of an optical illusion, because in the early period, a little added weight in the area of the nipples is immediatly observable as a little bump against the background of the flat male chest. Later, because of contour development, additional growth is not as apparent.

Doing a little mathematical exercise here, suppose we say that this initial bump is about a half inch high, and suppose that we call it's volume one volume unit. in order for this bump to grow to an inch in height, the volume must grow eight times! So it should take about 8 times as long to get the second half inch as large as the first. To get the next inch will take 64 times as long as the first half inch, and so on.

But wait! Don't be discouraged by my mathematics. You can grow cups, firm B cups, in a year for about $55, and unless you're some kind of a breast fetishist this should be all you need to be quite stunning. After that, all that happens is that your figure gets to be needlessly heavy.

INTROSPECTIVE REFLECTIONS

If I've seemed to be somewhat equivocal in my attitude toward hormone therapy throughout this article, I'm sorry. But I didn't write it as a sales pitch, and I own no stock in Ayerst Pharmaceutical.

However, lest you think I'm unduly pessimistic, let me set the record straight by reporting that I've had some really nice experiences both with my breasts and because my upper body has become feminine.

When I'm in a feminine phase, I find that the mere presence of breasts can be very reassuring, and I've derived lots of satisfaction from just being able to reach up and feel them or look down and see that they are there. Of course, the way they look in the mirror can also be fairly erotic, but then I've become rather used to the way I look, so this usually doesn't do anything for me.

In the early days of therapy, I found that it was exciting to feel the growth going on under my nipples. And later on, as my breasts began filling out, it was pleasant to note that they were so much larger.

I was reminded of them every time I moved my arms. (This sensation, which is created every time the inner arm touches the outer bulge of the breast, is really one of the most constant sensations that one has; and, of course, as the breasts become larger and larger they actually begin to get in the way of many motions!) This is nothing new to the girls, but it always was quite startling to me!

At about the six month point, when my breasts had developed enough weight and volume so they became bouncy, I noticed a new sensation. Every time my body would make a sharp vertical movement, as it did when I was running, jumping, walking down steps or going over bumps on a bicycle, a little twinge would take place in my breasts. This could sometimes be quite thrilling, especially if it came unexpectedly. It was almost as if someone had touched them!

As the sensitivity of my breasts increased with time, I noticed that they had turned into truly secondary sex organs; and it was during this period that I learned to love to have my nipples fondled, stroke, pinched and kissed.

Later, when my libido was gererally down from its peak, because of prolonged treatment. I found that a girl could cause enough erotic stimulation when she caressed my nipples to enable me to get erect, if I hadn't been able to make it before. Then, if I had trouble reaching orgasm; further stroking would help push me over the edge!

I think, of all my sexual experiences, this was the most thrilling! I can't imagine anything greater than to be loved by a girl who really desires me as a female and who loves my breasts because they are an erotic attraction to her.

Transvestite Fantasies

As we go through the world of crossdressing, many of us never realized that there could be so many different tastes and styles involved with it. The majority of us that do indulge in dressing the part of the opposite sex are normally satisfied with picking our styles off the rack and wearing them as if that was all there was to it.

But as we search our minds, and dwell on the in-depth subject, we find that there is just a little more to it than meets the eye.

For instance, what was your age when you could comfortably put on your favorite outfit and go to a gathering, meeting others or just taking a walk down a lonely, dark street? How often have you thought about your secret desire that drives you to put on the dresses, skirts and blouses, or what have you? If you did find the answer, how many of us could actually dress the part of our fantasies and carry them out, even in the slightest configuration of it?

From our files at UTTS, we have taken some of the most popular fantasies and given them to our staff artist to see if he could capture a rendition of what our files show. Although we couldn't possibly run them all in a single issue, throughout the pages of this magazine we have tried to give a general all around picture.

We plan to carry this addition as a regular feature of this publication in future issues. If you like what your see, or don't see what you like, then write in and tell us what you feel is needed to capture the point of Transvestite Fantasies, and then watch for it to appear in our future issues.

This issue will be featuring The Classic Little Girl, The French Maid, The Shoe Fetishist, The Hetero-sexual, Homosexual, The A-sexual, The Slave Girl, Domination, Bondage and several more for your entertainment and enjoyment.

We will be running a contest in a very near issue that will involve the illustrations you see here on these pages. Anyone sending in photos of themselves portraying the different fantasies can enter, and the winners will be receiving cash prizes and gift certificates. The winners will have their photos run next to the fantasy portrait that most portrays the theme it implies.

However, you must send in a signed release in order for us to publish your picture. winners will be notified as to what issue their photos will be in.

Transvestite Fantasies have a wide range of customs, feelings and situations, some of which are illustrated here and on the next few pages.

Crossdressing Party Life

A Natural High

Hey out there in all those closed closets. Listen up, there is a fantastic group going strong and if your not part of the scene as of yet, what are you waiting for?

A few weekends ago, I was in Point Pleasant New Jersey, where a blockbuster of a party took place. The New Jersey chapter of UTTS, started over three years ago by my friend Susie Collins and his wife, has been improving steadily with every month of maturity. As wine grows better with age, so do the TV and TS gatherings.

The reasoning is quite simple. First, the initial years are spent attempting to find and dislodge TVs and TSs from their precious little shells. Once this is accomplished, everyone starts to benefit, especially you. Secondly as the list grows many return each month, party after party, to develope new friendships and continue on with the old ones.

By hiding at home, praying your telephone will ring and jump into your hands, or hope that the postman will bring you a letter, you prove nothing other than that you are still that same lonely, miserable and lost person.

At each get-together I attend in New Jersey I'm constantly amazed at the new arrivals to the scene. Their nervous faces at the beginning and those happy smiles in farewell.

I've observed this group emerge from an idea and burst into full success.

The work "party" is used to describe these TV/TS gatherings, and rightly so, because it is a party air. However, I'd like to clarify what really goes on for the misinformed and the frightened TV who hesitates at the word "party" Who dreams of pawing men and the or giastic scenes. I'd sometimes like to find one of those myself.

Imagine a ladies auxiliary meeting, card of some other type of party or group function, where women of all ages mingle and chatter gaily into the night about almost anything. Where they compare feminine ideas and exchange sincere compliments concerning a certain hair do or a stunning three piece outfit. Where they consume a little coffee and pastry, or a few mixed drinks and pretzels. Where they see each other once a month and enjoy a togetherness always yearned for.

Now you know what goes on. A transvestite or transsexual, can meet with others of similar desires. This is especially true for the pre-op trans-

THE INCREDIBLE JAMIE MARIE

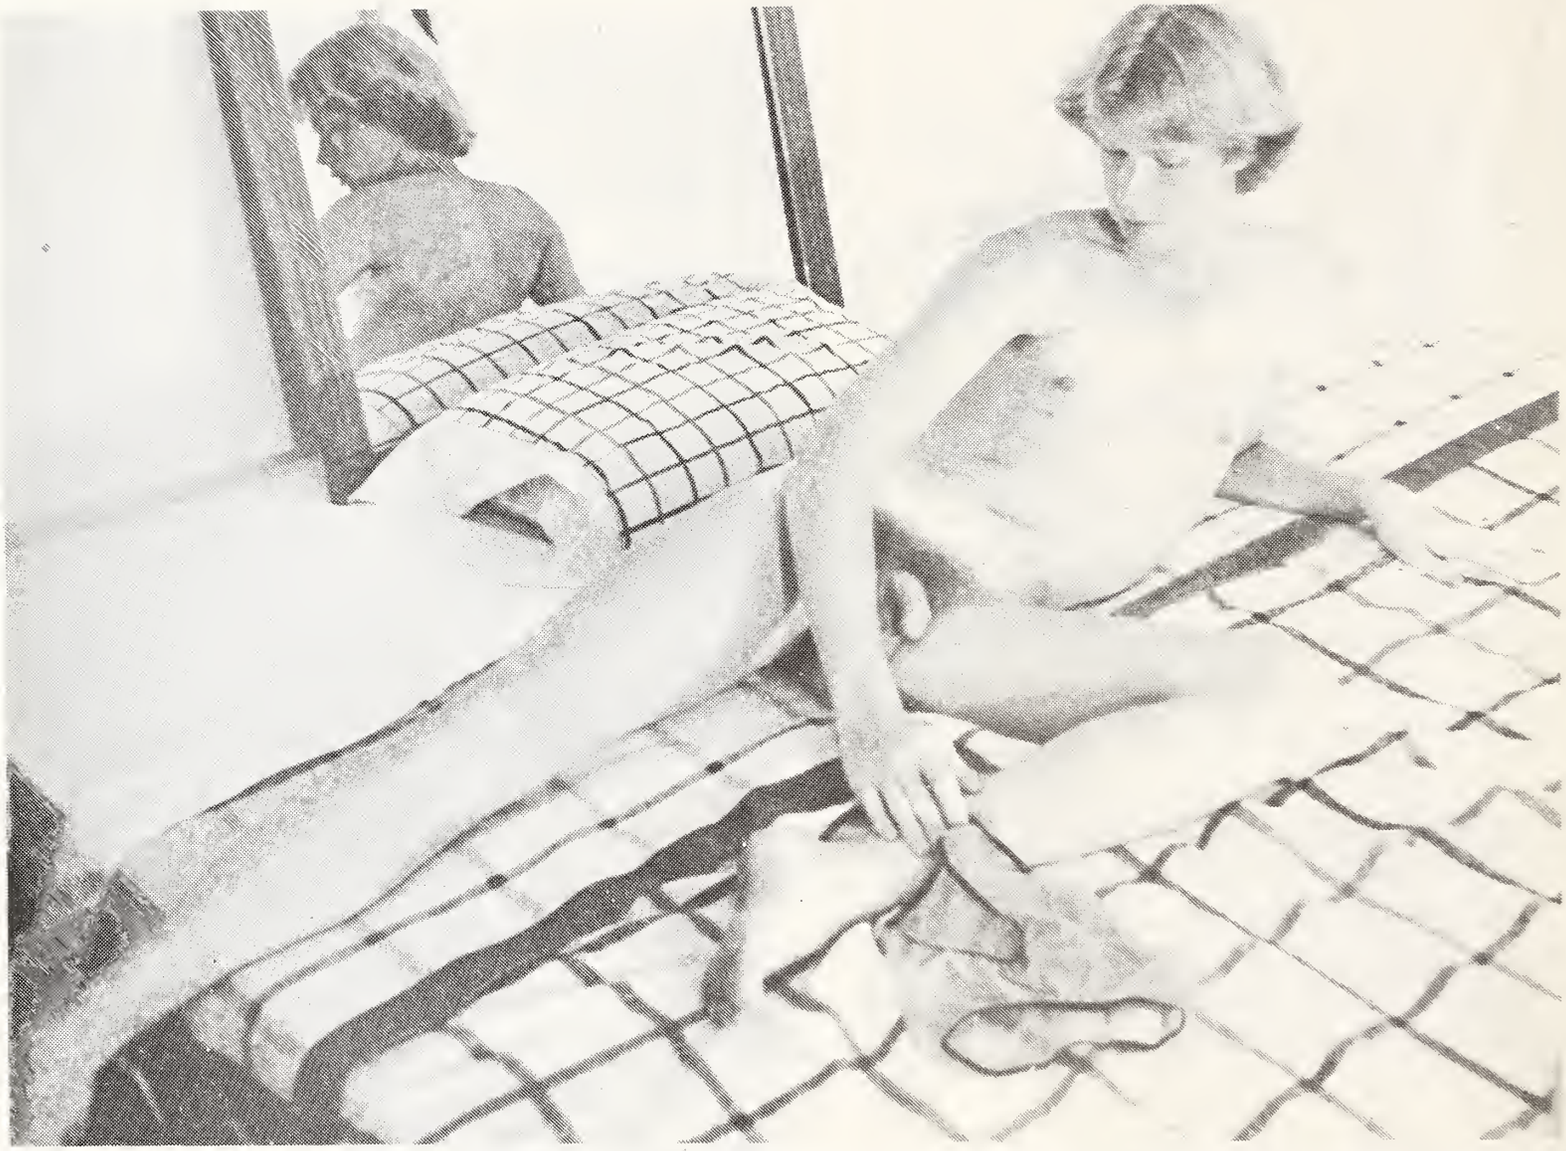
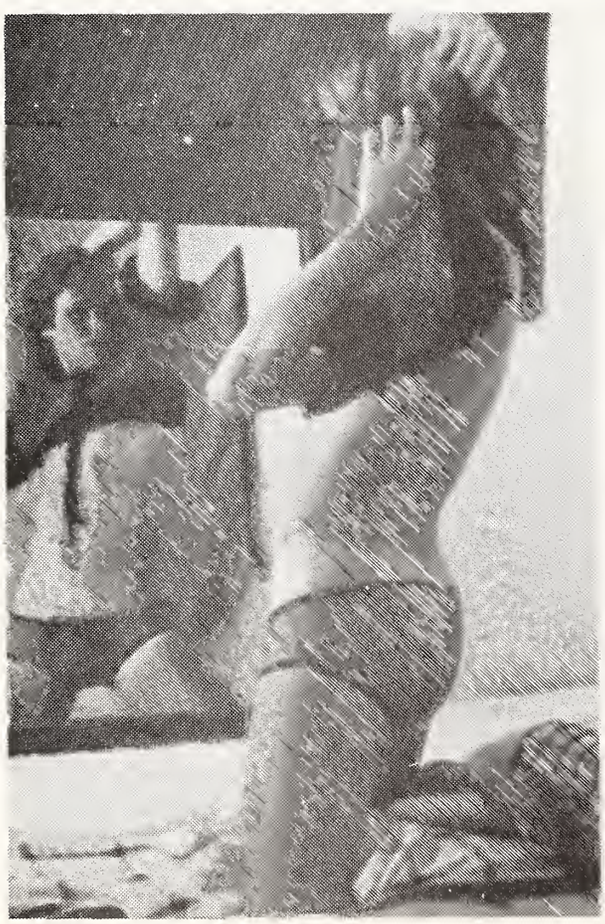
Jamie Marie is new to the world of crossdressing. Only 18 years old, and yet he has found that his talents are in great demand in the magazine and movies industry.

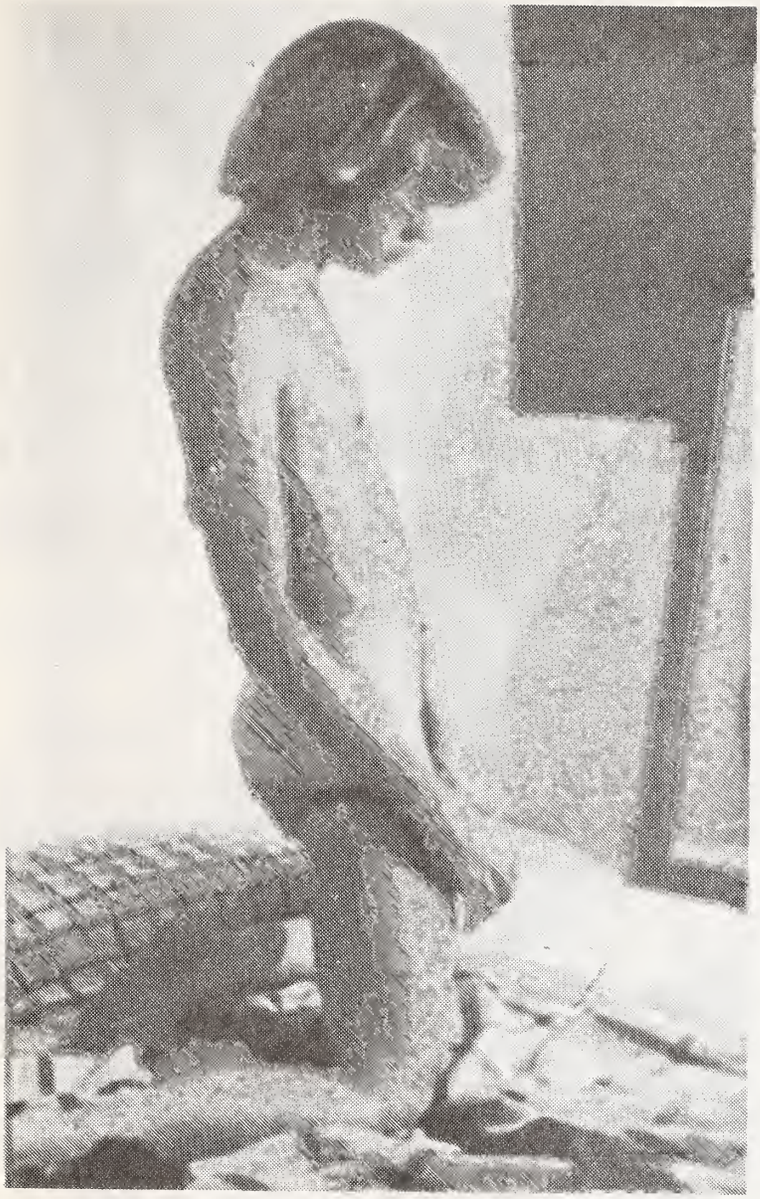
His favorite pasttimes are music, dancing and partying. He has a very warm personality, and without a doubt, your heart will open up to him only a few minutes after you've met each other.

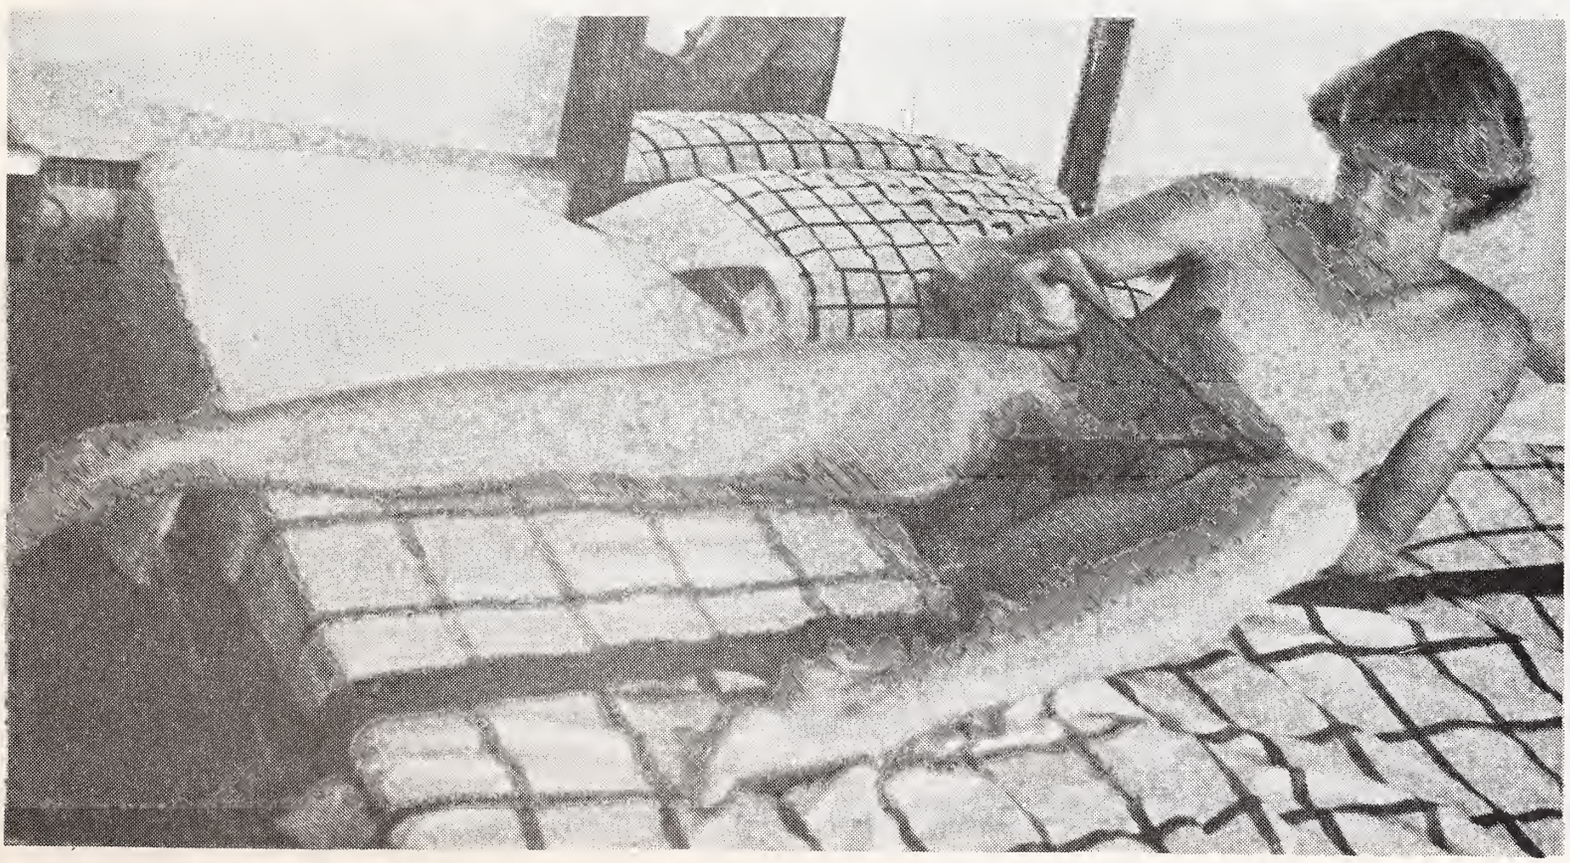
He is looking foward to attending the UTTS parties in Point Pleasant when they start up again this fall. He is the youngest member of our organization and is showing a lot of interest in it by taking on a lot of the work load that has been laying around for someone to get some spare time to get it done.

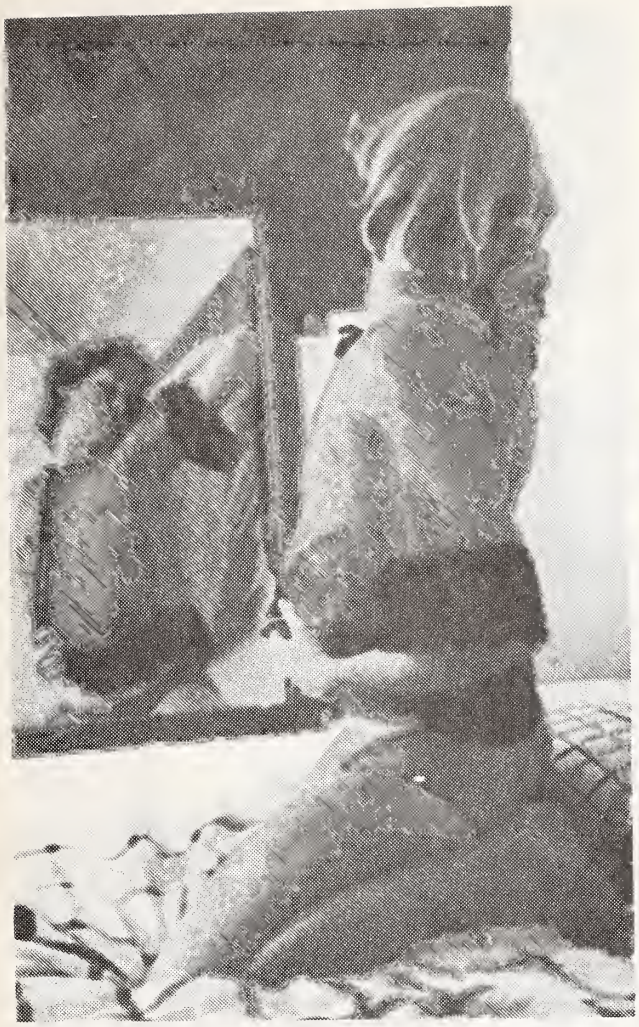
"I still have a lot to learn about crossdressing, but to me it's all fun. Every time I get dressed I can count on an evening full of laughs and good times. But it is important to be with the right people or I feel it could be disasterous for me."











"Deciding on what to wear is probably one of my biggest problems."

"I love stockings and the way they feel while I'm wearing them."

"What amazes me is that without the stockings I couldn't get the shoes on that I choose to wear for the night. Once the stockings are on, though, the shoes seem a little to large for me.

"I'm looking forward to the UTTS parties in the fall and to meeting all of Susie's friends that will be coming. In the meantime, I would love getting mail from all of you. So if you've got the time, drop me a line or two and say, Hi."

TS INFORMATION CENTER GALVESTON, TEXAS

The Janus Information Facility is now carrying on the work begun by the Erickson Education Foundation in the field of Gender Dysphoria, according to Zelda R. Suplee, founder and director of the facility. Ms. Suplee had directed the activities of EEF for almost a decade when it closed it's doors last year because of lack of funds.

As a service of Gender Clinic of the University of Texas Medical Branch, JIF is set up to provide professional referrals for treatment, to distribute pamphlets and reprint materials and to conduct research. It is presently engaged in updating and reprinting the famed pamphlets, which include such titles as "Guidelines for Transsexuals" and "Information for the Family of the Transsexual".

Janus is not supported by the University, Ms. Suplee notes, but must obtain private funding and donations. An advance contribution of $10.00 is requested to cover handling and mailing of the materials.

TS SURGERY AND EMPLOYEE BENEFITS

A recent ruling in Columbus, Ohio has held that sex change surgery is covered under an employee health plan.

An arbitrator, after hearing medical testimony, stated that "Gender Dysphoria" syndrome was a medical necessity and would fall within the provisions of the employee health plan. The company, an Ohio steel tube firm, maintained that surgery changing the employee's sex from female to male was "medically unnecessary" and not an illness. The arbitrator characterized the company's position as "a refusal to recognize the relationship between mind and body."

RESERVE MARINE CAPTAIN BECOMES A WOMAN

The Marines are always looking for a few good men. But they got more than they bargained for when they signed on one recruit who wasn't very happy as a man, and now he - - or rather she, is a woman.

How's that for a switch? The rough-and-tough Corps must now admit that, for the first time in it's glorious history, an ex-male Marine Captain is a female.

"It's the first case in the Marine Corps that we know about. That's right." conceded Lt. Col. Arthur Brill in Washington, D.C. "In 1976", he explained, "a Marine reservist underwent sex reassignment surgery in which the sex was changed from male to female."

"Subsequently, she applied for continuation in the Marine Reserves as a woman. Both the administrative and medical evaluations on the case are still on-going." Col. Brill said. "We expect a final determination within a few months."

Col. Brill declined to reveal the womans name, "because she's trying to establish a new identity - - and we have just got to abide by her wishes."

Los Angeles electrologist Lucia Johnson, who runs a fashionable skin care studio, is a cosmetic surgery specialist who worked on the Marine just before the sex change.

"He and his wife had three lovely children," she said, adding that, after the change, the wife took the children and left.

The Marine, a six-footer, is still a client of Lucia's, who also declined to provide a name.

HOUSE HUSBANDS

Moneys Worth recently reported a slowly growing trend of role-reversal in the U.S. More wives are going out to make the living while the husbands stay at home and run the household, cooking, cleaning, shopping and raising the children.

In most cases the role-reversal is working out much better than one would be lead to believe. Of course, at first it takes a little getting used to, but once the husband can establish a routine, then all goes fairly smooth.

If this continues, who knows how long it will take before the women will be wearing the pants in the family and the men take charge of the skirts and dresses and all the rest of the goodies that go with it.

BACK COVER

Attractive front cover is black, white, rose, pink and orange

"I was three or perhaps four years old when I realized that I had been born into the wrong body, and should really be a girl. I remember the moment well, and it is the earliest memory of my life...by every standard of logic I was patently a boy, I was James Humphery Morris, a male child. I had a boy's body. I wore a boy's clothes... as the youngest of three brothers in a family very soon to be fatherless. I was doubtless indulged soon to be fatherless, I was doubtless indulged. I was not however, generally thought effeminate. ...If I had announced my self-discovery beneath the piano, my family might not have been shocked but would certainly have been astonished."

FOR THE LOVE OF SATIN

From The Fantastic Fantasy Collection

Ever since I was a little boy, I have loved to dress up in women's clothes. I started by sneaking into my mother's room when nobody was home and trying on her panties, slips and bras. I would also try and fit into her dresses and shoes, but it wasn't until later that they fit me.

I continued to dress up all through my adolescence and by the time I was in high school, I was buying my own panties and stockings, and sometimes would even go to school wearing frilly lingerie under my slacks and shirts.

None of my classmates ever knew of my secret desires. I was very carful to keep it to myself, because I feared ridicule of the other kids. I wasn't very popular in school, because I guess the kids sensed that I wâs different. So, instead of going out to dances and football games on weekends, I mostly stayed at home and dressed up in girl's chothes as much as I could.

The soft feeling of the panties as I would glide them up my legs was incredible, and always produced a massive hard-on. It ached as I pulled the sheer nylon stockings up my legs, and fastened them to the garters of my garterbelt. When I got up and walked around the room, my legs rubbing against each other, I had all I could do to keep from coming right there in my panties.

When I had calmed myself down a little bit, I would put on a slip. Letting the soft, cool nylon slip fall over my shoulders would charge me up again. Sitting down at my mother's vanity, I would try some of her cosmetics. At first, I made a mess of my face, but later on, I became skilled at the use of lipstick rouge and eye makeup.

My last step was to put on one of my mother's dresses. Usually, they were too big, but it was all that I had. I would slip on a pair of her high heels and walk around the house until it was time to undress. Inevitably, all the excitement was too much for me and to alleviate the built-up tensions, I would masturbate, and my orgasms were always satisfying and intense.

For most of my adolescence, this was the only type of sex that I enjoyed. I knew that most people would consider me abnormal, but it didn't matter. By the time I was a teenager, I was a confirmed transvestite.

There was a lot of pressure on me from my family and friends to start dating. I had never seriously thought of asking a girl out.

Instead of looking at the girls in my classes as potential sex companions, I studied them carefully to see what they wore and how they made themselves up. Instead of wanting them, I envied them.

But I knew that I wasn't a homosexual, either. Even though I liked to dress up in girl's clothes, I had no desire to have sex with men. I suppose that I was so completely in love with women and their clothes that I didn't want to have anything to do with other boys sexually.

There was one girl whom I particularly adored. Her name was Jean, and she was in a couple of my classes. She was not particularly attractive, but I felt her to be ultra feminine. She always dressed in super feminine clothes, high heels, black stockings and frilly blouses. She was one of the few girls who seldom wore slacks to school. She was almost always attired in sweaters and skirts.

I figured that since everyone wanted me to start asking girls out, I would start with Judy. I finally got up the courage to ask her to the school dance that Friday night. To my surprise and relief, she readily accepted my offer.

The dance was a lot of fun. Judy wore a tight black dress, black stockings and black patent leather pumps. She was downright sexy, but all night, I found my jealousy growing. I wished that I was able to wear those beautiful clothes rather than my crummy sportsjacket. After the dance, we got something to eat, and I drove Judy home. When I arrived home, I immediately began to dress in a pair of black lace panties and locked myself in the bathroom to masturbate.

After that first night, I dated Judy frequently. I knew that she liked me a lot, but I never had the courage to confide in her and tell her about my transvestism. Once, we got pretty intimate in the back seat of the car. We were in a secluded spot, and I had removed her black bra, revealing Judy's full breasts. I caressed them as my hand was busy working at the zipper to her skirt. I undid it and slid it down her legs, revealing her black nylons, stretching up her thighs to meet the straps of her lacy black garter belt. Her love mound was hidden beneath a pair of black satin panties.

When I saw this sexy lingerie, my cock snapped to attention. I almost came right in my pants. Judy squirmed under my caresses, her nipples full and hard between my lips. My hands stroked every inch of her lithe body, stopping to feel the soft texture of her nylon undies.

My hand drifted up and down her nylon clad legs, feeling the familiar silky feeling, as I toyed with her garters. Judy liked it, too, and she was moaning and writhing to have my cock inside her.

I continued stroking her nylon clad body, patting her buttocks enveloped in the satin panties. I was tremendously excited, but mostly this excitement was for the lingerie and not the girl wearing it. Then, the unavoidable happened. I pulled down my trousers and freed my turgid cock from its cotton prison. As I was about to try and put it into Judy, it brushed against her nylon stockinged knee. The sensation was like fire on my penis and I continued rubbing it there. Judy was almost begging me to screw her, but by the time I got around to trying it, it was too late. I came right over her legs and belly.

I wanted to try again, but I was too embarrassed. Judy's undies had turned me on so much that I was unable to perform in bed. Needless to say, Judy dropped me like a hot potato, and once again I was left alone to my private transvestite world.

The rest of my high school days were spent in this solitary activity, because it was far more sexually satisfying than going out and trying to make it with a girl.

Yet, somehow dressing up in the privacy of my home was just not enough, so I tried picking up girls for quick sex. In all of the encounters that I had sex was very boring. I had no trouble getting it up when I saw the girl's underwear, but when I put myself into a girl's cunt, I had to imagine myself wearing lacy lingerie. Otherwise, I couldn't maintain an erection and would lose my ability to perform.

One of these girls was Susie. In a lot of ways she was just like Judy. She always dressed in super feminine clothes, and when we had sex I would merely imagine that I was wearing frilly lace panties, the garterbelt and black nylons and the satin bra. Susie and I were intimate for quite a while before I ever admitted that I was a transvestite.

After we had dated for about six months, we decided to get married. I really loved Susie and I figured that I would be able to dress in her clothes when she wasn't around, since we were almost the same size.

It wasn't long after we were married that I began dressing in her clothes when she was away visiting her mother or something. I would go into her drawers and select a pair of her panties, which was a difficult thing to do, since she had so many beautiful pairs. I would fasten a matching garterbelt around my waist and slide into a pair of her nylons. I would then slide into one of her full length nightgowns. The feeling of the nylon from the gown rubbing against my stockinged legs sent shivers up and down my spine.

Invariably, I would get a terrific hard-on, causing a giant bulge in my panties. Before Susie was due home, I would relieve myself and change around. Many times I just barely made it as I heard the car in the driveway just as I was getting out of her clothes.

One day, the worst thing that could possibly happen to me occurred. I was parading around the room in my wife's sheerest black nightgown, with black nylons, panties, garterbelt and bra to match. Susie was away visiting her sister for the afternoon and wouldn't return until dinner.

The feelings of being dressed in the sexy lingerie were so much for me that I decided to lie down and take a nap. Attired in the filmy undies, it wasn't long before I drifted into a deep, dreamless sleep.

I was awakened by a gasp from the doorway and when I opened my eyes, the first thing I saw was Susie standing in the doorway staring at me in disbelief. I didn't know what to say or do; I just wished that the earth would open up and swallow me.

Tears filled my eyes as I tried to give Susie the explanation for my bizarre behavior. In the next few minutes, I told her everything about myself and my transvestism.

Susie was not as upset as I thought she would be. She listened sympathetically as I told her of my desires for feminine clothing, and when I was through, she held me close for a few moments. Then she got up and told me to take a hot bath while she prepared dinner.

She ran the water for me and added a generous amount of bubble bath. When I went into the bathroom, she handed me a razor and told me to shave my legs. As she disappeared for the kitchen, her last words were: "If you are going to dress up in lingerie, you might as well do it right."

I soaked in the warm suds and shaved my legs until they were smooth and hairless. When I toweled myself off and returned to the bedroom, I found a complete outfit lying on the bed. From the kitchen,

Susie called for me to put those clothes on. I found a pair of pink panties with layer upon layer of frills and lace. I slid it up my now hairless legs and pulled it tight, caressing my bulging cock and balls.

I sat on the bed and took the pair of black, seamed nylons in my trembling hands. Slowley, I pulled each one onto my hairless legs. I fastened them to the garterbelt that matched the pink panties.

Next came the pink padded bra, which added curves to my flat chest. Then, I slipped into the flowing pink robe that was sheer all over, but trimmed with lace around the bodice in the front. The hem also had a generous amount of pink lace on it.

Finally, I glided into a pair of Susie's high-heeled, golden slippers. I was admiring myself in the mirror when I saw Susie standing in the doorway looking at me. She was smiling and remarked about how good I looked in girl's clothes. I must have blushed and Susie walked over and put her arms around me.

She told me that she really loved me and only wanted to see me happy. Dressed this way, she could see my happiness for the first time since we were married. We kissed for a long moment, our hands roaming over each other's bodies.

Her hand drifted to my pant-clad crotch. She rubbed the bulge through the several layers of nylon until I could hardly stand it. Pushing me onto the bed, she stepped out of her clothes and straddled my hips with her legs.

Lying flat on my back, I felt Susie fumbling at my panties. She moved them aside, allowing my prick to jump free. Rubbing my stockinged legs, she slowly descended onto my stiff rod with her moist pussy. I was never as hard as I was at that moment.

She plunged down on me, making every inch of my cock disappear inside her pussy. Beginning a furious up and down motion, she twisted her hips to squeeze every inch of my manhood. Together we rode, until at last I could not stand it any longer. I let go spurt after spurt of hot, creamy cum inside her, as her pussy lips twitched around my cock, signaling her own climax.

Exhausted, we lay together on the bed, Susie playing with the folds of my nylon nightgown and stroking my nyloned legs. She told me that from this day on, I was to dress in sexy lingerie whenever we had sex, because it turned her on as much as it did me.

I consented, and from that day on, I became a much happier boy-girl. All it took was the right girl who let me do my own thing.

Want to be a "Cover Girl" for one of our publications? Well, now you can, and very soon. We want to try something new with our magazines. As soon as we get the photos we need, we will start with it. Just send us 8 or more photos in different poses and a short article about yourself. The article can be anything about yourself or fantasy, the things you like or things you've done, hobbies and interests. We will then select the best photo to fit our layout and then use what we can of the rest to fill 2 or 3 pages of a photo layout of you and your story. Your photos will be returned as soon as the layout is complete and press ready.

To balance the layout, we'll need some of you standing, sitting and laying down. Try several different outfits. Night gowns, day wear, or specialty outfits. We need them all.!

If you have no photos and still want to be a covergirl, we can set up a complete modeling session with you in Point Pleasant, N.J. The only cost to you will be the motel room we use and a small fee to cover the cost of the photographer and the film used. We do our own processing and for your money, you'll receive a complete set of the photos taken, approximately 30 to 40 prints, professionally done.

If interested, contact us by mail. Send us a list containing your dress size, shoe size, height, waist measurement, chest measurement and hat size, along with the style of clothing you prefer to model in so we may gather several different outfits for you to model and pose in. We will also give you a complete makeup job if you request it or need help. You are requested to bring your own makeup and any clothes of your own you think you look best in. We will contact you by phone to arrange for our appointment, so be sure to include your phone number. Otherwise, it will have to be done through the mail, and it takes so long that way.

Leslie's Adventures in Petticoats

$3.50 ea. or Four for $10.00

Book 1. PETTICOATED MALE: Leslie's aunt, who is also his guardian, decides that the best way to rear him is to dress him in the dainty petticoats and frilly dresses of a young girl, to "curb his boyish spirits", as it were. This first novelet in the series describes his initiation into the lacy world of panties and pettis and what happens when he attends his first all-girl party dressed in them.

Book 2. PRISONER IN LACE In this book Leslie spends the night with the lovely hostess of a party, a girl his own age, the two of them snuggled in their dainty nighties in the same bed. Then, later on, he is enrolled in a school for girls operated by a Miss Staylace, a beautiful but formidable woman who loves boys dressed in girlish attire. Leslie attends his first formal in skirts.

Book 3. CAPTIVE IN SILKS After the formal paraty. which was a huge success for Leslie in many tantalizing ways, Miss Staylace persuades his aunt to let her 15 year old nephew spend the weekend under the lovely headmistresses guidance and tutelage in the ways of love and feminine life. Leslie is seduced by Miss Staylace, who is careful to cater to his budding femininity and masculinity at the same time.

Book 4. PETTICOAT SLAVE: The next day, a Sunday, Leslie's maid Marie, who has been instrumental in training him to wear feminine clothes and act like a girl, arrives with an armload of new frills for Leslie to wear while at Miss Staylace's apartment. Teh two women put Leslie through his paces and make mad love to him as well.

Book 5. ENSLAVED IN LACE: Back home again, Leslie discovers to his horror that his aunt has arranged with a local plastic surgeon, a Doctor Jane, to have breasts installed on his boyish chest by means of implanted padding. The surgery is performed, over his protests, and his new breasts bring to him a measure of acceptance of his new role in life — as a lovely teenage girl, delighting in her frills.

Book 6. FROM PANTS TO PANTIES
Seeking new friends of feminization to conquer, Leslie's aunt now persuades one of her friends, a Mrs. Sinclair, to have her son, Philip, dressed in frillies under the maid Marie's tutelage. Leslie must stand by and watch the younger lad subjected to being dressed in frilly panties, childish petticoats and lacy dresses, and knows that Philip (now Phylis) will not be the last victim of his aunt's mad scheme to feminize all boys.

Book 7. LAD IN PETTICOATS As a reward for his docile acceptance of his feminized state, Leslie's aunt takes him to a lingerie boutique which specializes in selling all manner of frillies to young boys, most of whom have been dragged there by their mothers. Leslie meets a prertty salesgirl who digs boy-girls and enjoys an amatory interlude with her, unaware that the fitting room has been equipped with one-way glass with a rapt audience on the other side. Soon the girl takes Leslie himself to the other side of the mirror, where he witnesses other sexy episodes.

Book 8. BOYS WILL BE GIRLS Home once again, Leslie and his aunt discuss the feminization campaign, then go to visit a young man named James who suddenly finds himself converted to Janie. Believing that Leslie is a real girl, the lad tries to make a pass at him with rather intriguing results.

Book 9. PETTICOAT BOY: Leslie travels in public as a girl for the first time, riding the crosstown bus to visit Carole, a young TV he met at the boutique. He is molested by a Lesbian who later turns out to be Carole's sister Sabrina. When they arrive at their destination, the two boy-girls and Sabrina enjoy a wild TV orgy.

Book 10. PANTY-CLAD LAD The orgy, begun in book 9 continues unabated and unabashed when Mrs. Stephinson, Carole's understanding mother, discovers the three in flagrant delicto and joins in the fun. It seems she has had a two-way mirror installed in Carole's bedroom from behind which she can enjoy witnessing the sexual shenanigans of her TV son and Bi-sexual daughter. Leslie is ravished marvelously.

Book 11. LINGERIE SLAVE: Returning home to his aunt and his maid Marie, Leslie tells them, in not too great detail, of his adventures with Carole and Sabrina and their mother. Later on, Carole phones and invites Leslie to go shopping with him at Madame Modiste's Boutique, where they buy new gowns and have new amatory trysts. Carole persuades Leslis to attend a formal party the following Friday night where all the boys come dressed as girls and all the girls come dressed as boys.

Book 12. LADS IN PANTIES Leslie, again at the request of his aunt, dons his little girl frocks to impress one or more of her friends that is about to have her son converted. After the initial show-down, Leslie and Justin, now Justine, are permitted to retire to Leslie's room till dinner. Leslis reveals a secret to Justine, that will make a very noticable change in her that will enable her to enjoy his new role to the fullest, taking the best of both worlds.

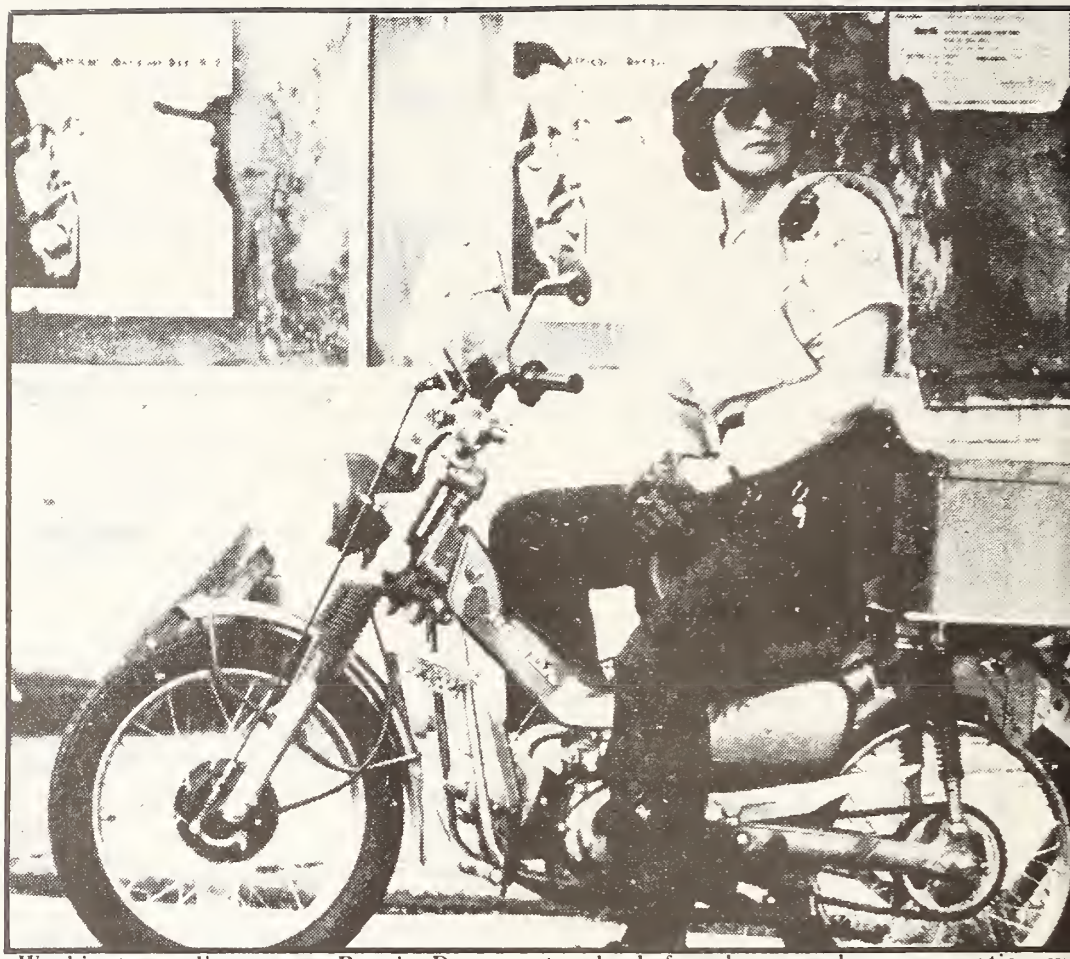
Sex-change police woman talks frankly about her tormented double life



Washington policewoman Bonnie Davenport, who before her sex-change operation w
Patrolman Ormus Davenport, patrols the seedy 14th Street section on her scooter aft rejoining the police force as a woman.

BONNIE DAVENPORT, the Washington D.C. policeman who had a sex-change operation, has finally spoken openly and frankly about her tormented double life that ended only when she underwent surgery to become a women.

Until a few months ago, 36 year old Bonnie was Patrolman Ormus W. Davenport III, an uncompromising undercover cop in the nation's capital with an off-beat approach to crime fighting.

With his full beard and shoulder-length hair, he took on Washington's big-time crooks as well as vice and drug traffickers in the same unorthodox manner as Serpico or Starsky and Hutch.

Now Bonnie Davenport is back enforcing the law in the same seedy Washington neighborhood she once patrolled as a man.

"I was probably the most macho guy you could meet," Bonnie confessed in an exclusive interview as she prepared for duty in the Fourth District headquarters. "But inside me I knew something was deeply wrong."

"In my last year as a male cop I lived a tortured double life, spending my days taking the same chances with my life as my partners were, and spending my free time as a woman. I knew that I should have been born female."

Bonnie admitted that at times the mental torment was so great that she didn't care if she was gunned down by hoods. "I took greater chances than I needed to." she recalled, "I was a woman inside and it was burning me up."

But in December, Patrolman Davenport's dearest wish came true when a famous sex-conversion surgeon in Colorado transformed Ormus into Bonnie.

She rejoined the police department as a woman officer where, carrying a standard issue revolver and a nightstick and wearing a crash helmet, her scooter patrol took her into the infamous 14th Street section among the pimps and pushers.

"I really have had no trouble when I'm out on patrol," she said, "apart from jibes from kids. The fifth and sixth graders are the worst. They shout insults. Children don't know how hurtful they are."

Back at headquarters, most of Bonnie's fellow officers have learned to accept her new role. "It's a situation none of them — not even the department — has had to face before," she said.

"Sometimes I'll overhear someone saying: 'I didn't know he was gay.' But that isn't it at all. I never was. Still, I can live with that. They'll get tired of it."

More responsible colleagues remember that Bonnie was a male cop with an excellent eight year record on the force.

In a famous undercover operation two years ago, where police set up a bogus fence for stolen goods in a warehouse, Bonnie — then Ormus — played a prominent role which led to scores of arrests.

It was this superb record, which included 19 departmental commendations for hard work and courage, that prompted police brass in Washington to re-admit Bonnie Davenport as a woman.

"I think they would have preferred if I hadn't come back," she said. "But I love police work, it's my life, and it's what I do best."

"And I am protected by the law here, which says that there shall be no discrimination, even against transsexuals." Bonnie said her feminine feelings went back as far as she could remember.

"Men with gender troubles tend to try to be terribly masculine, proving themselves all the time in the hope of overcoming their inner feelings," she said.

"I was just like that. I wanted to suppress these emotions I felt. But it's like having a broken leg. If you don't do something about it, you're a fool."

Three years ago, Davenport's wife died of cancer, leaving him with three young children. After a long family conference, he began his double life, dressing in the evenings as a woman.

"I had thought about it deeply for a long time," she said. "The feelings I'd been having were getting stronger. Even while I was a father and a cop prepared to put my life on the line, I knew I was living a lie. I had to seek treatment."

Finally, Bonnie went to Dr. Stanley Biber, a sex-conversion specialist in Trinidad, Colo., who had already performed 350 similar operations.

When she began having hormone treatment in 1976, she told the police department. It was a bombshell.

"It was a situation they had never even thought about, let alone faced," she said. "Shortly before my final treatment and the operation, I took a police exam as a woman. It took all the courage I possessed, knowing I had probably caused a tremendous controversy. But I just knew I should be a woman."

After Bonnie's surgery, her children — aged 11, 12 and 13 — were included in the post-operative therapy to help them cope with the new situation.

"I don't want them being taunted at school or in the neighborhood," she said. "Although I realize it's bound to happen some of the time."

Bonnie's biggest test came when she faced a panel of police surgeons and psychiatrists, passing all her psychological and physical tests with flying colors.

"For the first time in my life I felt right," she said.

Officer Davenport checks a derelict on her beat. "The only trouble I have had is from kids who shout insults," she says. "They don't know how hurtful they are."

"It appears I grabbed the wrong bag from my trunk."

EFFECTIVE METHODS OF HANDLING MANY BODY HAIR PROBLEMS

Shaving is the most popular eradication method, and three out of four shavers prefer a razor and blade. Women, however, often use a combination of many methods to remove hair.

Contrary to popular belief, shaving will not make hair grow thicker, faster, or darker. The hair root is below the surface of the skin and is unaffected by any above-the-surface trimming.

Shaving how-to

A good shave depends on proper preparation. If you shave with a blade and razor, wet the hair first. Hair can absorb about 35 percent of its weight in added water. It takes about two minutes for hair to become thoroughly wet and thus soft, pliable, and easier to cut. Hot water will speed this process somewhat, but there are at present no preparations which will soften hair instantaneously.

The principle behind the new hot lathers is that heat helps soften hairs. Basically, the purpose of all shaving creams and lathers is to help keep water from evaporating while you shave.

You will find the most lubrication in a brushless cream. For those with oily skin, the higher soap content in a lather worked up with a brush or an aerosol foam will help flush away oils. A cautionary note: Some people experience skin irritation from "lime" or hot lathers.

Women often prefer to shave while bathing and find that toilet soap makes the job easier. Shaving when the skin is dry scrapes the skin and shortens the life of the blade. (Some women, of course, prefer an electric razor.)

After shaving, loosen the razor, give it a hot water rinse, shake it, and let it drain; wiping will dull the blade. Some new razors don't even need this cleaning process.

Dr. Lazar adds a caution: "While shaving against the grain gives a closer shave, it increases the risk of ingrown hairs." Clipping below the surface of the skin may make the hair—particularly if it is curly—turn inward and act as a foreign body, producing inflammation. If you're troubled with this problem, shave with the grain, try an electric razor, or use a depilatory. (More on depilatories later.)

Electric shaving is gaining in popularity and is thought to be less irritating to the skin. There are pre-shave preparations for electric shaving, too, designed to de-fat and dry the hair and make it stand out from the skin.

Nicks and scrapes can result from both methods of shaving. Applying pressure with a tissue or dry cloth, or using a styptic pencil, should stop the bleeding.

Men with acne will have to experiment to find the least irritating shaving method for them. Some will do better with a blade and razor, others with an electric shaver—some will be more comfortable not shaving at all.

Shaving over moles in the beard area isn't dangerous unless the moles enlarge or become irritated. A man with warts in the beard area should, however, see a doctor; warts are caused by a virus and may be transmitted to other areas by the razor.

Women sometimes experience underarm skin irritation after applying certain antiperspirants immediately after shaving. A wait of a few hours generally will prevent any discomfort. And next time you shop, check the labels. Antiperspirants are now available that can be used safely right after shaving.

Other ways to remove hair

Many women are troubled by the perfectly normal growth of hair on the face, chest, neck, or abdomen. There is no medical reason why women with normal facial hair, for example, should not shave it off; yet few do. Most women seek other methods. For example:

ELECTROLYSIS: Electrolysis is the only safe way to remove hair permanently. In this process, the hair root is destroyed by an electric current passing down a very fine needle which has been inserted into the opening of the hair follicle. Since each root must be treated individually, and a site such as the upper lit may have hundreds of hairs, the process can be time-consuming and expensive. It is also uncomfortable.

A skilled operator is essential, since improper treatment may cause scarring or infection. Many states have no training or licensing requirements for electrolysis. Few doctors undertake this procedure, but some doctors employ a technician to do this work, or they can refer you to a trained technician.

About a 15 to 20 percent regrowth of hair treated this way is typical: even a skilled operator cannot tell if the needle actually destroyed the root.

Except for cost, home electrolysis devices have, according to the AMA "all the disadvantages of professional electrolysis, plus others." The obvious drawback is that self-treatment is awkward. Additionally, the inexperienced user of a home device probably will require several minutes to treat a single hair, whereas a skilled professional can work much faster.

PLUCKING: Plucking or tweezing is the preferred method for thinning the eyebrows or removing scattered hairs, since it is the least dangerous. Tweezing hair from a mole may cause irritation; trimming the hair close to the surface is better.

DEPILATORIES: Depilatories are chemical agents which break down the structure of the hair so that it detaches easily from the skin at the surface. Because hair and the outermost parts of the skin are similar in composition, compounds destructive to hair sometimes irritate the skin.

Depilatories are available in cream or liquid form; they usually require about ten to 15 minutes to work. Products designed for the arms and legs may be too harsh for the face, underarms, and elsewhere; milder depilatories for these areas are available.

Read and follow the instructions carefully, and never apply depilatory near the eyes, or on inflamed, chapped, broken, sunburned, newly tweezed areas, or the vaginal area; discontinue use if irritation occurs. After depilatories have been used, new hair growth becomes obvious at the same rate as it does after shaving.

WAXING: In this process a thin layer of wax is applied to the skin and allowed to set. Then the wax is stripped off quickly in the direction of hair growth, pulling out the hairs embedded in it. New growth may not become apparent for several weeks.

The procedure is, however, obviously painful and even dangerous is the wax is too hot when applied. Further, a stubble will show from the time new hair appears until it's long enough for the procedure to be repeated. Waxing should be performed by someone trained in the technique. The process can be used for leg and arm hair but is more frequently applied to facial hair.

ABRASIVES: Abrasives, such as pumice, can be used to rub off the hairs at the skin surface. Abrasives are inexpensive, easy to use, and are unlikely to irritate, unless used too vigorously. They do, however, take a good deal of time to apply and rub off and, thus, are impractical for large areas. And use of an abrasive should be followed by the application of a mild cream to lessen any skin irritation.

BLEACHES: Strictly speaking, bleaches conceal rather than remove superfluous hair. You can buy prepared bleaches or you can make one using the formula of one ounce of six percent hydrogen peroxide (known as 20 volume peroxide) plus 20 drops of ammonia (household ammonia or ammonia water found in drugstores) plus enough baking soda or soap flakes to make a paste. Make a small amount first and apply it to a test area on your arm for a half hour to see if irritation occurs. If not, mix a new batch and use the preparation immediately; the bleaching action starts as soon as mixing occurs. Wash off after a half hour; if the hairs are not bleached thoroughly, the procedure may be repeated a day later. One effect of repeated bleaching—in this case, an advantage—is that the hair becomes damaged and breaks off.

She's in Limbo Between Female, Male Worlds

Feels Trapped, Wants to Become a Man

By Liz Parker
Press Staff Writer

asbury park press

Nicky Speciale discusses her problems as a woman who wants to be a man

Nicky Speziale is trapped in a body her mind won't accept.

She was born in Long Branch 33 years ago as Mildred Speziale -- a person who, she says, has never thought like a woman, never acted like a woman and never wanted to be a woman.

"I'm a stranger in a man's world and a stranger in a female world," she says.

With her family and friends' support, Nicky started seeking therapy towards a sex change opreation two years ago but stopped when she discovered costs were progibitive.

Nicky now says she's desperate -- so desperate she's willing to under experimental sex change surgery to lower the medical and psychiatric testing costs involved -- estimated at $10,000 to $20,000.

"I'll even put myself up as a guinea pig. Maybe it's a bad thing to say. But that's the way I feel about it.

"And you can't get more desparate than that," she said.

Although the U.S. does not keep records on medical conditions, Nicky would be generally classified as one of the 20,000 to 40,000 persons alive today living as a transsexual (a person who, because of psychological and physical reasons, is living in the wrong gender.

Statistics Once Showed some half of the number of transsexuals, including two Monmouth County youths, committed suicide. However, that rate has probably dropped in recent years, medical experts say, because of continued public enlightenment about the problem.

Although the state's Medicaid program does pay for preparatory testing and the operation under stringent guidelines, Nicky does not qualify for Medicaid coverage through welfare or social security.

As a trained electroplater, she has held some 11 jobs in the area during the past 10 years -- mostly factory work. She has been unemployed since October -- her longest period without a job -- and has been collecting unemployment insurance totalling $62 a week.

Holding a job, however, is not as difficult for Nicky as actually getting a job.

Her face is rimmed with a beard. Her broad shoulders belie her 5-foot, 2-inch height and she speaks in a deep voice.

"A lot of people don't even know I'm a woman now," Nicky says. "I've even been called 'sir', 'son', which I don't mind at all. Where some people would get upset over it, I feel their right. That's me -- inside that is me. Outside physically, I can't help it."

Her Appearance is so masculine that her former employees, friends and lovers say they thought Nicky was a man at first sight.

"I know there is discrimination against me when I go for a job," Nicky added. "They look at me like I've got two heads. I guess they see my name (Mildred) and they know what I am -- a female."

She uses the name Mildred on her job applications, although she goes by the name given her as a teenager by friends in Texas -- Nicky.

"I could lie," she added. "But then they'd find out and it would be worse. I have hair growth on my face. I will not shave

"Some people might think I'm crazy," she said. "But I say to myself 'I'm not crazy' -- I know I'm not."

it. That's something I won't do. It's part of me," she said.

Nicky, because of her appearance, is an unusual case for Patricia Prigge, a counselor with the state Division of Vocational Rehabilitation. Mrs. Prigge agreed to talk and meet with Nicky after the Asbury Park Press contacted her about Nicky's dilemma.

"I think she is unusual because she does grow a beard and talk like a man. Most of them (transsexuals) don't (look like their preferred sex). I see it affecting her vocational aptitude," she said.

The vocational rehabilitation program will pay for the necessary pre-surgical sex change psychiatric and psychological testing, but it will not pay for other pre-operative sessions such as hormonal treatments and gender clinics.

Under recent state vocational rehabilitation guidlines, the state will not consider transsexualism a vocational handicap.

"It's a very difficult case and it's very frustrating for me. The attitude here is not too good on transsexualism," Mrs. Prigge said. "But I'm going to try. I believe her appearance would qualify as a vocational handicap. She can't be a male and female. She can't be nothing or both.

"And I think Nicky is much more capable than doing factory work," she added. "She's much more on the ball."

Mrs. Prigge's assessment of Nicky's sense of responsibility also makes Nicky somewhat unusual compared to others in the same situation.

Dr. Thomas Mazur at Johns Hopkins Institute, Baltimore, Md. says specialists in the field usually will not perform the surgery unless ther is evidence of a stable work history. A stable work history, he says, shows the person has adjusted to his or her preferred gender and has the ability to pay the bill.

And medical experts agree there is no place in the U.S. SUCH an operation would be performed at no cost.

Dr. George Whittle, Red Bank, the area's leading expert on sex change surgery, several years ago said one reason why he gave up the practice was because of the great financial losses he incurred. Whittle performed eight male-to-female operations.

"They generally don't pay their bills. They have been their own worst enemy. They have created the problem. Some of them can be bad people," he said.

Dr. John Money, professor of medical psychology at Johns Hopkins, said manipulation is symptomatic of males wishing to become females.

"They can be very histrionic, very theatrical," he said. "It can be symptomatic. Wheras those wishing to go from female to male can be very down-to-earth, business-like and seem to accept the responsibility."

Area hospitals also discontinued facilities for the operations. One of the reasons for the discontinuation, Whittle said, was because all but one of his eight patients were from out of state.

"The feeling was hospitals are funded by local people for local people and there was also a critical bed shortage," he said.

Whittle said he also encountered strong Catholic opposition to the operation.

He Thought The religions reaction unusual because two of his patients had the blessings of priests and a third was referred from Duquesne University, a Catholic institution, in Pittsburgh.

The patient was the chief comptroller for the university and had been named Out-standing Businessman of the Greater Pittsburgh area two years before the operation.

"It is an absolutely fascinating surgical challenge. I like the challenge but the aspect of it financially didn't work out. It just wasn't very practical.

"These people are desparate. You can sympathize with them. But I, at this point, do not want to get involved in the political, emotional and religious overtones of this," he said.

'Whittle performed the operations in the early part of the decade before being sued by one of his former patients last year. The patient has charged her doctors botched the surgery and left her in a state of limbo unable to enjoy new sexuality.

Whittle said the suit, which is still pending, is "groundless" and that the patient refused to obey doctor's recommendations.

He figured his practice lost agout $100,000 over a period of time because of not being paid and publicity about the suit.

Whittle Says Transsexualism is a disease.

"Their personality's are in complete incompatibility with their gender," he said.

The true transsexual is biologically asssigned a sex but has the personality of the opposite sex. Psychotherapy alone, he says, cannot alter the individual's gender orientation.

"It's terribly, terribly frustrating. They all feel badly. They feel that they've been dealt from the bottom of the pack. Even when you're normal, life is tough enough." he said. "It is very easy to empathize. Their's is a terrible problem, a horrendous obstacle in life."

Whittle explained the differences among transsexuals, transvestites and homosexuals.

A transvestite, he said, is a person of a certain sex who dresses or impersonates the other sex, but has no desire to change to the other sex. A transsexual may also be a transvestite.

A homosexual is happy in his particular sex but directs his emotional attentions to a person of the same sex. Homosexualism, he said, is also caused by a biochemical abnormality, as in the case of gout or diabetes.

"Unfortunately, this is all descriptive. We have nothing to hang our hat on," he said.

Medical Experts Agree transsexualism is a combination of psychological and physical causes -- but exact biochemical causes are unknown.

Preliminary research on monkeys show, for instance, that a pregnant monkey, given the hormone "progesterone", during sexual who can gain so much from someone a little more advanced. We are all aware of the difficulty in finding an understanding ear from someone close to you. Here you can experience not only that understanding, but acquire it from those who are close to you.

The group in Point Pleasant attracts girls from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and New York, mainly NYC. Many travel several hours by car so the old excuse, "Oh, it's just too far to drive", is utterly ridiculous. I've been tearing up the pavement for years now in all kinds of weather, good and bad, and you can bet your last pair of pantyhose that I've enjoyed every single trip.

Each month sees new faces popping out of the woodwork. Each party welcomes TVs and TSs who are searching for that certain friendship. The letters I receive every week are from very lonely, frustrated individuals who beg for information about the nearest gathering. They never regreted writing that first letter. They found what you are still searching for.

There is a lot of serious business that is taken care of at these parties, but fun is the real name of the game. There are always different things happening at each party.

One month Susie will set a theme on cheer leaders and little girls, the next maybe, will be nurses and French maids, or just a regular gathering with a special speaker or demos that are always useful to us. Subjects on sex changes to eye liner, family problems to beard removal, there are many subjects to talk about and be discussed, but what ever is going on, you are sure to have a full evening of fun and enjoyment. You will also find that more and more real girls are joining in on the staff of UTTS, they are always at the parties to help out where they can, and lend an understanding ear when required.

My first hormones were obtained at one of these parties, a doctor that attends regular every month, made this possible for me. It wasn't quite that easy, but it's great to know that you can find just about anything at these parties.

So you see how beneficial this group can be, not only to yourself, but to others as well. There are groups all over the country, some big and some small, some are very established and others just getting started. There is no reason why you couldn't attend one of them, or even start one yourself in your area. You only need four of five TVs. If it didn't get any larger than that, at least there would be five more girls who found compassion with each other. And who found other crossdressers to share their ideas and problems with.

Anyone seeking information about our group can contact me at U.T.T.S., P.O. Box 246, Bay Head, N.J. 08742. We will be gald to help you with attending, or starting your own gatherings.

Want to be invited to one of the UTTS parties, just send us a letter stating that you desire to attend them, and we'll put you on the invitation list. In a very short time you will get an inbitation to attend one of them. From then on arrangements will be made at the parties for attendence of the next.

We're sorry, but attendence to the parties are by invite only, and in order for us to make the proper arrangements for those who will attend them, it is also required that they be paid for in advance.

To attend a party, it cost ten dollars per person, or eighteen dollars per couple. A limit of about thirtyfive people is necessary because of the lack space at present. We are constantly in search of larger plces to hold them in, but until we find one that is acceptable to us we will still carry this limit.

The parties are held twice every month on the second and forth Saturdays of each month from September to May.

Summer parties are not being held as of yet the interest in them is very slight, when enough people desire to attend them, then we will start them up.

Its now up to you, so come join with us and find out what fun you can really have.

Members of UTTS, will begiving a discount when attending our parties, one dollar off at every party you attend, and if you bring a guest you will get a two dollar discount off the regular rate.

If you attended every party we sponsered, your membership would be worth $18.00 in the party discounts alone. Three dollars more than it costs you to join. Just another way that being a member of UTTS is beneficial to you. If your not a member, and care to join, membership information will be found elsewhere in this magazine.

pregnancy to prevent abortion, produces transsexual male monkeys, Whittle said. The research, however, has never been performed on humans.

Whittle said transsexualism could also possibly occur in multiple births or in the last child in a large family.

The incidence of male and female transsexualism is about the same. "It's extremely complicated," he said. "And again, a biochemical aberration may not be the case every time. we just don't know."

Whittle and medical experts at Johns Hopkins also say it's possible Nicky's condition, with her beard and voice, could be caused by a hormonal imbalance.

"We don't know just by looking," said Whittle, who saw Nicky two years ago on reference from a psychologist.

"A tumor on the adrenal glands could cause the masculine manifestations and produce too many male hormones of testosterone. And you don't know how much of the problem is phychologically related to the physical appearance.

"There has to be a substantial work-up," Whittle said. "You simply can't rush into something like this."

Under Medicaid funding procedures, patients are required to attend a gender clinic for at least two years prior to the operation and undergo extensive phychiatric testing. The patients progress is constantly reviewed before the actual operation is okayed and paid for.

Although no records are kept specifically on the operation, Midicaid spokesmen said at least five such operations in the state have been paid for since the federal agency went into effect some time ago.

None of the operations, however, have been for a female-to-male change, which experts say never results in total sexual competency.

In fact, Dr. Thomas Mazur at Johns Hopkins said patients are often advised not to go through the costly and painfull process of having a penis surgically made.

"We try to tell people to use a prosthetic, a dildo of sorts, because the operation is far from adequate," he said. "Even if it is made, it won't erect on it's own during intercourse."

He Said Other less drastic steps for a female-to-male change include hormonal treatment, chest flattening and a complete hysterectomy.

Nicky says she's aware of the operation's limitations, but she says her psychological well-being is the most important factor in her decision.

"Sexually, they're not always sure about it," she said. "The psychological factor is the main factor in it -- that is what it is all basically about."

Whittle remembered Nicky as being "pretty well decided in her mind," when he saw her two years ago.

Medical experts agree, however, at least two or three years of hormonal, psychiatric and psychological testing are needed before surgery.

And Nicky has begun to see psychiatrists, psychologist and endrocrinologists under Mrs. Prigge's guidance at the state Division of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Mrs. Prigge has counseled a transsexual who had a sex change operation, then tried to commit suicide 10 times and now wants to reverse back to the original gender. The patient's operation was funded by New York Medicaid.

Whittle said statistics, compiled in England as the U.S. does not keep such records, once showed that more than half of transsexuals committed suicide before undergoing a sex change operation.

He Told About Two teenage transsexuals in Monmouth county who killed themselves some 10 years ago because they didn't know where to look for help.

"No one at the time believed it was a disease and nothing could be done for them," he said.

He said the suicide rate among transsexuals had probably lowered in recent years because of continued public enlightenment on the matter.

Nicky says she's not suicidal.

"I am very unhappy. But I wouldn't go as far as hurting myself," she said. "I would like help. But I'm not stupid enough to take my life over it."

She Has Spent Her life in a self-described nightmare, caught in limbo between the female and male worlds and the "gay" and "straight" worlds.

She is Nicky Speziale, who at age 17, said she realized her dilemma and ran away from home only to have her father discover her diary and disown her for her "sick" thoughts.

Nicky, now 33, is a person who is generally classified as one of the 20,000 to 40,000 transsexuals alive today.

She is a person whose personality, for biological and psychological reasons, cannot adjust to her genetic sex.

Now after 15 years of recognized "gender agony", she wants to fit her sex with her mind and become a male. And she has the support of her mother and sister, her former co-workers, her lover and her friends -- homosexuals and hetersexuals alike.

Nicky, one of three children in the Speziale family, grew up a tomboy in Highlands, spent some years in New York and two years with her sister and father, a career Army officer, in Germany. During her early teenage years, she and her father returned to the U.S. and settled in Texas.

"I wasn't well-liked in Texas. In fact, I did very poorly in school because of it," she said.

I Was Embarrassed all the time because I would look at all the girls -- the way guys would look at girls and think about them. I would sit there and blush because I knew what I was thinking and felt everybody must be reading my thoughts," she said. "It was really a hassle."

"I was real nervous in school. I couldn't concentrate on my work. When I left Texas, I was a sophomore and that was the end of my education right there. I just didn't continue it. I couldn't handle school anymore because of it."

Nicky, however, never told her family of her torment until years later. Instead, she kept a diary.

"I couldn't talk to anybody. So I had to write it all down," she said.

At age 17, she left Texas to escape her father and hitchhiked to New York City to live with her aunt. She left her diary behind.

"He had no understanding of me at all. I never revealed to him my feelings in that way," Nicky said. "I hitchhiked to New York to get away from him.

"And he found out what I was, because I had a diary I kept," she said. "He got into it, wrote my aunt and told her that he wanted no part of me anymore; that he couldn't understand it and he thought I was sick."

Nicky Has Not Spoken with him since.

Her older sister Andrea Klose says she, Nicky and her late brother were raised in a "very, very strict upbringing" and remembers her sister as always the tomboy.

"She always made friends with the boys. She played like them. She was accepted by them as a boy. She acted like a boy," Mrs. Klose added. "She is broad through the shoulders and she is very hairy."

A beard rims Nicky's face. She has a deep voice and broad shoulders for her 5-foot, 2-inch height.

"She was always the truck driver as a little kid. Even growing up she wouldn't wear a dress," Mrs. Klose said.

The only time Mrs. Klose remembers Nicky wearing a dress with lace was at her Catholic communion.

Her mother, Geraldine Herold, remembers her youngest child hiding under the porch at the age of 4 refusing to come out if she had to wear a dress.

Nicky told her family of her torment when she was in her late teenage years.

"i more or less found out on my own," her sister remembers. "When she finally told me, in a way, I was surprised. But in a way, I wasn't.

"She Never Felt like a woman. She doesn't think of herself as a woman in any sense of the word," Mrs. Klose said. "She doesn't even like it when I call her 'she'. She's always been 'Joe Truck Driver'."

Her mother said she had no idea about Nicky's problem until Nicky told her.

"If I had any brains, I would have known by just the things she did -- wear little boy caps and at Christmas, no dolls, just toy guns.

"I didn't think there was any harm with guns. I saw a lot of little boys with dolls," she said.

"I really didn't know. She used to cry when she did tell me and she'd say, 'What happened?' and she would go out and get drunk. She'd come back and cry, 'How come this happened to me? I'm supposed to be a boy. How come, Mom?'

"What could I say?," her mother lamented.

While staying with her aunt in New York, Nicky read about homosexuals in Greenwich Village. At that time, homosexuality was "fairly tagoo," Nicky recalled.

"I figured well, what am I? I feel like I feel. But I must be classified as a homosexual because supposedly I am a female and care about other females. So, I went down to the village to see what was happening," she recalled.

"But I wasn't really content with this. It really wasn't what I wanted. It was like a parade to me. They were all on parade, on exhibition, putting on a little act."

"But I Wasn't Acting. They were all acting. I could see it and it annoyed me to no end. But I had to go along with it because that's what the lifestyle was supposed to be, as far as homosexuals went," she said. "So I was classified like the rest of them, Homosexual.

"I felt like a stranger. I couldn't identify with straight people. I couldn't identify with gay people. I didn't know what to do," she said.

Nicky is not a homosexual.

"Even my gay friends think I'm strange. Homosexual acquaintances will say, 'You want to be a woman and you want ot be in a gay bar, act like a woman.'

"And I say, 'Well, I can't because I'm not (a woman).' I don't feel the part. A gay woman only wants a woman," Nicky said. "They don't want a woman who is like a man in any respect."

Nicky, however, has the support of her homosexual friends for the operation.

"She has all the characteristics of a man. I thought she was a guy until we became friends," said Richie Wheat, a bartender at the Odyssey tavern, Asbury Park. "She should have the operation."

"It's The Best Thing that could happen," Betty Yale said. "She's great. She's my best buddy. She'd give the shirt off her back for someone."

"She should have the operation. She's so desparate. She is hassled so much of the time because of the way she looks. She goes into her regular bank and they wouldn't cash her checks until they got somebody to authorize it. It's so difficult for her," said Jay Hall, who used to date Nicky.

Nicky said she used to shave her beard but stopped shaving a few yearas ago.

"I have played the game. I have shaved. They're still prejudiced against me. They know where I'm coming from. The beard makes a little difference. But they do know.

"I will not walk around acting feminine. That's not me. This is myself right here. I will not put on airs and make myself something I'm not," she said.

Nicky says she has always dated women.

It was a result of her second serious romantic involvement that she left New York City for Highlands some 11 years ago.

"I was going with a girl at the time. She was 18 or something. I was 21 or 22 and I had to get out of her house because her mother found out about us. I was staying at her house in New York and came to live in Jersey. That's why I came here -- to get away," she said.

She Met Her current love, Rita (not her real name to protect her family), in a gay bar in Asbury Park.

Rita said she used to be a lesbian, "But not any more, because Nicky, in my mind, is a man. I'm a very understanding person.

"She more or less took the initiative," Nicky said. "I never came onto anybody in my life. I was always stand-offish. Afraid really -- afraid of rejection, you might say."

Rita, who said she also thought Nicky was a man at first sight, supports Nicky in her quest for a sex change operation and says it wouldn't change their relationship.

"no, it wouldn't. Only sexually. It's still Nicky. It's not a new person," Rita explained.

Rita also supports -- but more reluctantly -- Nicky's wishes to have an experimental sex change operation if it will defray the medical and psychological testing costs involved, estimated at between $10,000 and $20,000.

"I'm a little leery about that. But Nicky wants to do it and I know how desparate she is about it," Rita said. "I would be very supportive. But I would still be a little afraid. But I really wouldn't hold her back. I wouldn't want to. I really feel for her."

Medical experts say there are no facilities which would perform experimental sex change surgery.

But Nicky Is without the money to pay for the cost of the operation and does not qualify for Medicaid which pays for the operation. She has been unemployed since October -- her longest period without a job -- and has been hampered in job searching because she doesn't have a car.

She has held 10 jobs in the area within the last 11 years -- mostly factory work, where she can wear pants.

She was once so depressed for employment, she says, she took a job in a nursing home which required her to wear a dress.

"It was against my nature but I did it because I needed the money. I worked as a nurse's aid. I suffered with that. I had to wear a uniform and all that. Everybody knew where I was coming from there, too. It was obvious. But it was my job. I had to take it," she said.

"She looked like a guy in a woman's uniform," her sister recalled. "I laughed at her. She was so mad. I thought she was going to kill me."

Three of Nicky's former co-workers at her last job in a plastics factory in Lakewood said Nicky was probably the best worker in their nine-person unit.

"She was one of the best workers there," Linda McCarthy said. "Once you get to know Nicky, she's a helluva nice person. She's just one of those persons you just can't help liking. She was very open about what she was.

"If She Had Made any type of advance, it would have bothered me. But she's just not that sort of person," she said.

Mrs. McCarthy and two other employees admitted at first they were uneasy working with Nicky but the awkwardness soon disappeared.

Kathy Emerick, who worked with Nicky for two month, said: "When I first went there, I was told there was a lesbian there. I had never met one and was a little nervous. But once I got to know her, it didn't bother me at all," she added. "Because I didn't think of her as a lesbian. I thought of her as a man."

Nicky had to quit the job because her car broke down and she had no means of transportation. She has since returned to live in the Bayshore area.

Her friends generally use the words "warm, generous and unselfish" to describe her.

But she will not hide the way she feels.

"I'm not supressing myself. I would not hold it back and lie because they would think I was a freak. They want to know? Ask me; I'll tell you how I feel. That's the way I am. I've always been that way.
